Pope's Condition Improved

Given New Course Of Treatment; Pope Rests More Easily Than Since Collapse

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 4—(AP)—A new course of treatment brought fresh improvement to ailing Pope Pius XII today. Tonight he was resting more easily then since his collapse Thursday.

Doctors said the rally, began after 48 hours of desperate illness, would continue if food can be given the 78-year-old pontiff.

The first alkaline washing of the stomach—part of the prescribed course of treatment—took place in the afternoon.

An official medical bulletin at 8:42 p. m. 1:43 p. m. (CST) said: "The bettering of the condition of the Holy Father continues. The treatment announced in the earlier medical bulletin has begun with good results. This afternoon the Pope rested better than for some time."

Another heartening word came from the Vatican. The Pope feels strong enough so that from a bedside microphone he will give his blessings to thousands scheduled to assemble in St. Peter's Square tomorrow for mass prayers to his recovery.

One of five medical specialists called last night to the Pope's bedside said he had a recurrence of vomiting with traces of blood this afternoon. The specialist said, however, that this was not preoccupying.

He added that the pontiff must have absolute rest for at least a month if the new treatment begun today is to be successful. During this period, the Pope must remain in his Vatican apartment, and possibly in bed, he said.

The Italian radio said tonight the Pope's digestive difficulties may have been aggravated by the accidental swallowing of some chromic acid about a year ago, when he was undergoing dental cure. This could not be confirmed.

The doctors initiated a new treatment of blood plasma, vitamins and other medicines designed to build up the Pope's strength.

Two of five physicians attending the 78-year-old pontiff said in a medical report: "It is imperative to reestablish the strength of His Holiness. His strength, without any doubt, will rapidly recover if a gradual feeding is carried out and the therapy of vitamins and liver extract, already started, is continued."

They dispelled fears that cancer might be involved in his gastric distress by saying he was not suffering from a tumoral sac of the digestive tubes.

The confidence expressed in the report was echoed by all those who visited the weakened leader of th world's more than 400 million Roman Catholics during the day. Doctors, cardinals and relatives emerged from the papal apartment with optimistic words.

Burglars Take $1,250 From Store In Lincoln

Burglars had no respect for Santa Claus early Saturday morning down at Lincoln. They robbed the Raymond G. Carney Hardware Store of between $1,250 and $1,500 in merchandise and carried off a box of Christmas packages which had been neatly wrapped by Mrs. Carney.

Mrs. Carney reported she had spent considerable time wrapping her Christmas gifts which included everything from aprons, neckties up to electric clocks and other appliances. The thieves didn't miss a package—they got them all.

The robbery took place sometime around 3 a.m.

The thieves jimmied a front door to get it open, then went into the store and made a fine selection of valuable merchandise.

Among the articles selected were electric appliances such as coffee makers, toasters, deep fryers, waffle irons, food mixers, irons, electric razors, electric clocks, two drills, three shotguns, five rifles, 34 cases of assorted shotgun shells, and a hunting coat.

It was definitely determined the thieves headed back north from Lincoln as ribbons which had been on the Christmas packages had been ripped from the packages and thrown away, about three miles north of Lincoln.

The State Highway Patrol along with Sheriff Bob White of Benton county conducted an investigation.

Andrew Gainey Will Be Guest—

Sedalia Symphony Orchestra Will Use New Risers Monday

Inaugurating the use of stage risers for the first time, the Sedalia Symphony Orchestra, Abe Rosenthal, conductor, will present its second concert of the season Monday night at the Smith-Cotton Auditorium at 8:15 p. m. Andrew Gainey, young baritone, will be the guest artist.

The stage risers were purchased by the Sedalia Symphony Society, and they were delivered this past week in time for the concert. Previously, the orchestra presented its concerts from the stage floor without any gradual elevations for the various sections of the orchestra. This, made it difficult for the audience to get the full benefit of the orchestra as a group. Further, it made it more difficult for direction.

According to orchestra personnel, a most interesting concert will be presented omororw night and a large attendance is expected. The program will be augmented by the appearance of Andrew Gainey, rising young personality of the concert stage. Gainey, who has also appeared on numerous radio and TV chain programs, is one of the most versatile artists ever appearing with the orchestra. Many Sedalians will recall seeing him playing the role of Escamillio, the Toreador, in a recent televising of "Carmen." He is also a winner of Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts' and a summer replacement of James Melton on "Harvest of Stars.' To reflect on his versatility it is noted that he has not only been a member of the New York City Opera Company and the Charles L. Wagner Opera Company, but he has toured in such shows as Cole Porter's "Kiss Me Kate' and "The Rogers and Hammerstein Concert." Further, he has played dramatic roles in "Studio One" and "Kraft Theater' on television.

Andrew Gainey

The program will open with the overture "Rosamunde" by Franz Schubert, played by the orchestra.

Andrew Gainey will then sing "Non Piu Andrai" from the "Marriage of Figaro," by Mozart; "Traum Durch Die Dammerung" by R. Strauss; "Danse Macabre" by Saent-Saens; and two folks songs, "At the Foot of Yonder Mountain" and "The Rich Old Lady."

The orchestra will return to play "A Tribute to Sigmund Romberg," arranged and adapted by Douglas McLean, and "Espana Rhapsody" by Emmanuel Chabrier.

In his second appearance, Gainey will sing "Hop-li, the Rockshaw Man," by Manning; "To One Unknown" by Carpenter; "Strictly Germproof" by Sacco; "There, But for You, Go I," from "Brigadoon" by Lowe; and "Luck, Be a Lady Tonight" from "Guys and Dolls," by Loesser.

Admission to the concert will be by season ticket or a general admission charge of $1 for adults and fifty cents for students.

Naugel Heads New Civic Center Board

A meeting was held Friday at the Chamber of Commerce office for the purpose of re-organizing the Civil Center board, at which time Harry Naugel was elected president. Naugel, one of the town's busiest men, was reluctant to take on another job but, feeling that the Civic Center is a necessity both to the Sedalia Air Force base and to the city, accepted the responsibility.

The most important objective of the board is to find a location suitable for the center and anyone knowing of such a place is asked to contact Harry Naugel or any member of the location committee composed of Carl Abbott, the Rev. David Funk and the Rev. Warren Neal.

The other officers elected for the year are the Rev. L. D. Hardiman, vice-president; Frank Mehl, secretary; and Ralph Salmon, treasurer.

In addition to the committee on location, other committees elected were budget, Ralph Salmon, the Rev. J. C. Jackson and Harry Brougher; supervisory, Capt. Henry Willoughby, Mrs. Anna Bagby, Capt. John Herbst and Jock Cunningham; publicity, the Rev. L. P. Parker, Mike O'Connor and Henry Salveter; and housing, John Vandekamp, J. Price Alexander and Oscar Lawson.

After a review of the past Civic Center, the possibilities of a USO, the fact that funds were being raised by the United Fund for operation of a center and the definite need of such a place, it was decided to organize for the purpose of carrying out the establishment of a center.

The following organizations and representatives were present: Ministeral Alliance, the Rev. David Funk and J. C. Jackson; Sedalia Air Force Base, Capt. Henry Willoughby and Capt. John Herbst; Chamber of Commerce, Mike O'Connor and Jack Faber; Board of Education, Ralph Salmon and Harry Brougher; Northside Citizens, Oscar Lawson and the Rev. L. D. Hardiman; Negro Council, Carl Abbott and Price Alexander; the NAACP, L. P. Parker; the United Fund, Harry Naugel; Former Civic Center board, Rev. Neal; Park Board, Frank Mehl.

The next meeting will be Friday, Dec. 10, at the Chamber office.

Butler Elected To National Demo Chairmanship

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 4—(AP)—Paul M. Butler, Indiana committeeman today was elected chairman of the Democratic National Committee, succeeding Stephen A. Mitchell.

Butler's election climaxed a controversy among party leaders. Rep. Sam Rayburn of Texas, incoming speaker of the House, wanted to postpone action until early next year.

Adlai E. Stevenson, 1952 presidential nominee opposed delay and the committee decided to go ahead.

The choice of Butler, represented a victory for the Stevenson-Mitchell wing of the party, although Stevenson had said two other leading candidates—Michael V. DiSalle, former Toledo, Ohio, mayor and price administrator, and President James Finnegan of the Philadelphia City Council—were equally acceptable to him.

Butler was the first member of the committee to be promoted from the ranks to the chairmanship in a decade, and the first to be chosen in a contested election in about 40 years.

Federal District Court Jury May Get Dale Trial

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Dec. 4—(AP)—The trial of Evan R. Dale, boss of 38,000 AFL common laborers in Southern Illinois, and another union official on labor racketeering charges probably will go to a federal district court jury Monday.

The defense rested today, and Federal Judge Fred L. Wham recessed the trial until 10 a. m. Monday, when final arguments will begin.

Dale and James Bateman, business agent of an AFL pipefitters union at Murphysboro, are accused of trying to extort $1,030,000 from the builders of a 197-million-dollar electric power generating plant at Joppa, Ill. Dale is charged alone with extorting $7,500 from a subcontractor on the big job.

Dale, the first of five defense witnesses, entered a general denial of the charges that he attempted to shake down Ebasco Services Inc., the original general contractor, to guarantee labor peace on the project, which was delayed by repeated work stoppages. He also denied other accusations made by government witnesses.

Bateman did not take the stand.

Demands Action On 11 Airmen

US Asks Prompt, Decisive Action On Sentenced Americans' Release In Red China

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Dec. 4 (AP)—The United States demanded prompt and decisive action by the United Nations today to obtain the release of 11 American fliers and other U.N. prisoners still held by Red China.

An official memorandum charged the Chinese Communist action in holding the American fliers was "a clear-cut violation of the Korean armistice agreement."

U. N. executives scheduled a Steering Committee meeting for Monday afternoon to consider the demands.

Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., chief U. S. delegate, presented the request for quick action to Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold and Assembly President Dr. Eelco N. Van Kleffens, of the Netherlands.

The Steering Committee will take up Lodge's plea for a debate to be held quickly by the 60-nation Assembly itself instead of routing it first through the main Political Committee.

The United States and its 15 allies in Korea carefully discussed the step before Lodge came in with his letter, approved by the other countries, asking the Assembly to make a special agenda item of the "complaint of detention and imprisonment of United Nations military personnel in violation of the Korean armistice agreement."

Actually the Peiping regime had announced it was holding 13 Americans, but the U. S. complaint dealt only with the 11 fliers. Two civilians held along with them were excluded because the U. N. had no jurisdiction over them.

Russia's delegate, Arkady Sobolev, told reporters he would not comment until he had a chance to read the U.S. letter and memorandum.

The 16 Allies planned to meet Monday to frame the resolution they will ask the Assembly to adopt.

Lodge's memorandum did not say exactly what steps will be asked. It did not indicate what other U.N. personnel were involved, but the United States had charged previously that hundreds were being held.

The explanatory memorandum, required for placing items on the U.N. Assembly agenda, detailed that the 11 U.S. fliers were in a B-29 plane shot down near Sunchon, in North Korea, Jan. 12, 1953.

More than a year and a half later, Lodge's memorandum said, the men were brought before a Chinese Communist military tribunal and sentenced to long terms in prison.

Red China's radio announced the Communist action Nov. 23 and the United States immediately moved for release both directly in Geneva and through British diplomatic channels based in Red China. The Communists rejected the pleas.

In Washington, the GOP majority leader, Sen. Knowland of California, said that the U.N. Assembly should remain in session to press efforts to free the prisoners if they are not released by Christmas.

Lodge's memorandum said, "The government and the people of the United States are shocked and outraged by the treatment thus accorded to its airmen who were serving the cause of peace under the Charters, and hold these same feelings for the men of other nations who are held prisoner.

"The governments of other nations having troops in Korea share this feeling of indignation at this violation of the armistice agreement.

"The United States believes this conduct of the Chinese Communist authorities has created a serious situation for the United Nations . . . which requested the United States to provide a unified command of United Nations forces in Korea. The United States believes the United Nations must now act promptly and decisively to bring about the release of these 11 officers and men and all other captured personnel of the United Nations Command still detained."

After emerging from his talks with the secretary general and Van Kleffens, Lodge declined further comment. "That speaks for itself," he said of the memorandum.

Lodge conferred in Washington earlier in the week on the question. Secretary of State Dulles flew here yesterday to consult further with Lodge.

At a news conference, meantime, President Eisenhower remarked that the United Nations could hardly keep its self respect and not try to do something to get the fliers released.

The attitude of the Soviet Union should be tipped at the Steering Committee meeting.

Jacob Malik, the Soviet ambassador who hurried here from London last week after Andrei Vishinsky's death, made one brief allusion to the case of the fliers in the opening debates on the Korean settlement early this week. He said it had no place in the discussion on the Korean political stalemate.

That debate will be resumed Monday in the main Political Committee.

MKT Will Discontinue Green Ridge Station

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The M-K-T Railroad was authorized by the State Public Service Commission today to discontinue its open agency station at Green Ridge and substitute a caretaker.

The railroad said the station had been losing money and its business could be handled just as well from Windsor. Green Ridge is 12 miles southwest of Sedalia.

Six Persons Perish In Head-on Collision

ROBSTOWN, Tex. (AP)—Six persons were killed in the head-on collision of two cars two miles south of this south Texas city early today. Two others were injured.

State Highway Patrolman H. M. Cough said the collision occurred when one of the cars, a 1949 sedan, tried to pass another car.

TWO DEAD, THREE INJURED IN ACCIDENT SATURDAY—A father-in-law and son-in-law met death in an accident early Saturday 12 miles south of Sedalia on U.S. Highway 65 in the above two-car collision. Three St. Louisans who were going on a hunting trip went to the hospital with severe and painful injuries. Charles W. Burnett, 67, father-in-law of Henry D. Ebeling, both of the Lincoln area, were fatally injured. Ebeling died instantly, Burnett died at the Bothwell hospital two hours later. They were riding in the car cross-wise of the highway, while the St. Louis men were in the car in the foreground. The body of Ebeling lies covered with a blanket to the left of the highway. The picture was taken looking south. Trooper Pete Stohr of the State Highway Patrol is crossing the highway to check on the cars. (STAFF PHOTO)

Four Severely Hurt—

Two Persons Are Killed And Ten Injured In 6 Car Wrecks In Sedalia Area Saturday

Two Benton Countians, father-in-law and son-in-law from the Lincoln area, met death and three St. Louisians were severely injured about 6:45 a. m. Saturday in a two car collision, 12 miles south of Sedalia on U. S. Highway 65. The deaths of the two men has brought the total fatalities for Pettis County from traffic accidents to 11 for this year as compared with six for the same period in 1953. Nine persons had died from accidents up to Dec. 1, while six had died up to Dec. 1 for the same period in 1953. For November of 1953 and November of 1954 one fatality resulted in each of those months.

Dead:

Henry Dick Ebeling, 55, who resided four miles east of Lincoln. He suffered a crushed chest and broken neck. Ebeling died instantly.

Charles Westerfield Burnett, 67, Lincoln, driver of the car in which Ebeling was riding. Burnett died at the Bothwell Hospital at 8:55 a. m., having suffered internal injuries and crushed chest.

Injured:

Paul E. Griffin, 30, 2216 Menard, St. Louis, is in a serious condition having received a fracture of the right knee cap, bad abrasion over the left eye, and bruises. He was the driver of the second car.

Henry Rook, 26, 426 Sidney, St. Louis, who was riding in the back seat of the second car suffered a severe laceration over the left eye which took several stitches to close.

Burnett, Carlton, Griffin and Rook were rushed to the Bothwell hospital in ambulances from Ewing Funeral Home, McLaughlin Funeral Chapel while the body of Ebeling was taken to the Gillespie Funeral Home.

Dr. D. R. Edwards treated Burnett, Rook and Griffin, while Dr. John Carlisle treated Carlton.

The accident occurred in a straight highway. Rook, who was riding in the back seat of the car driven by Griffin told Trooper Pete Stohr of the Missouri State Highway Patrol and a newspaper reporter, that Griffin was headed south on the highway. He said the other car was headed in the opposite direction.

Rook explained the other car appeared to pull out to pass a large truck and then pulled back into its own lane of traffic. "As we were passed by the big truck, the car darted out in front of us and Griffin was unable to stop the car. We crashed into the midsection of the old car on the right side."

Trooper Stohr reported it appeared as if Burnett was the driver of the car. He said it was evident the driver of the automobile must have lost control of the machine from the markings on the highway. The car probably went out of control as the driver pulled back toward his own lane after deciding not to attempt to pass the truck. The car looked as if it might have struck a spillway on the east side of the pavement sideways and then shot out westward across the pavement.

Griffin had not time to stop his car, a 1946 Ford tudor, but he did apply his brakes sliding his wheels about 20 feet. The Ford crashed into the right side of the 1939 Chevrolet driven by Burnett.

Louis Smart who resides at Ionia, was one of the first to arrive on the scene. He reported the under part of the dash began to blaze in the Chevrolet, and others who arrived immediately went to getting the men away from the cars and fighting out the blaze. Smart covered Burnett with blankets brought to the scene and gunny sack material to keep him warm.

Rook, the less injured in his car, hurriedly assisted Griffin from the car and went to work getting Carlton out of the machine.

Rook told Trooper Stohr that they were employed at the Kroger warehouse in St. Louis, and they had decided to go hunting on a farm north of Lewis off Highway 52. He said Griffin and himself had been hunting there last year with a friend of the farmer, whose name he did not recall, and they decided to hunt Saturday. They left St. Louis about 1:30 a. m. Saturday.

The highway was blocked for more than an hour. The two automobiles, badly wrecked, were towed in by Chamberlin's and Hamlin's wrecker services.

Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher, coroner, who viewed the body of Ebeling at the scene of the accident, and Dr. J. M. Rodeman, deputy corner, who viewed the body of Burnett at the hospital,

Garden Clubs Offer Wealth Of Yule Decoration Ideas

Any type of Christmas decorations for the inside of a home may be found at the Christmas Decorations Show which opened Saturday and will be open from 2 to 5 o'clock this afternoon. This show offers bright and helpful hints for Christmasy homes that range from Christmas trees to place cards and at the Garden Center just outside the big room upstairs are instructions on how to make some of the clever things on the table.

Among the interesting things about the show are the Christmas trees, all of them cedar and some of them decorated with typical Christmas decorations but two of them with white rings all over them that draw attention of people as they enter. The rings turn out to be made of popcorn and on one inside the wreaths are tiny Christmas balls. On the other tree large Christmas balls are inside the popcorn rings.

Another interesting tree is the sweet tooth tree covered with candy, cookies and popcorn balls and with it a little poem that tells about the tree and gives an invitation to take the scissors and cut off what you want. The scissors are covered with glitter.

Gift boxes are decorated with little decorated Christmas trees, with Christmas balls and bells, one box has a Christmas tree made of red cinnamon drops and below is "Hi" made of green and white stick candy. There are Santas made of plastic spoon, and a boy on skis. Then there is one package in the form of a little red house with cotton snow on the roof and a red stick of candy for the chimney.

The madonnas are very beautiful. One on a blue satin base. is arranged with frosted pink Christmas tree balls in front and frosted evergreen, pine cones and silver balls as a background. A lovely madonna, seated, and a round dark blue background edged with golden wheat, and an arrangement of the satin like circles from the money plant with edges of gold. The handle holders are gold with white candles. Another madonna has tuberoses with evergreen.

An assortment of arrangements for the buffet are very lovely. A huge square pink glow candle is arranged with loops of wide pink satin ribbon, frosted evergreen and large silver bells. Then there is the bird tree and the arrangement with white tree branch and the large white deer. There is a little white tree decorated with red ribbon bows, and other arrangements with candles and cones.

On one of the tables for dessert bridge is a red table cloth, green dishes and Christmas trees of white tarlatan stars covered with tiny stars of all colors. These are made on candle, a big tree in the center and tiny trees for placecards. Another table has a silver satin cloth with pink dishes and an arrangement of pin Christmas tree balls. Another table had an evergreen centerpiece with Christmas balls and another had a centerpiece of angel candles.

The mantle piece is a nativity scene.

One of the prettiest pieces is a table arrangements on foam block with delicate angel figurines, pink bells and blue metalic lace. Candles, tree balls and Santas made up many of the other attractive arrangements.

Corsages for Christmas were gay and small Christmas tree balls and bells combined with ribbon and greenery. One was a corsage of red satin roses with silver ribbon and another a corsage of red carnations with bold balls and ribbon.

Tray arrangements were mostly winter scenes and very realistic. One was entitled an old fashioned white Christmas and was a snow scene with little log cabin house.

Popcorn seemed to play a big part in the coffee table arrangements. One arrangement was red candles and the red paper folding bells and another was a merry-go-round.

On the novelty table was a doll

Ex-Convict Slain In Illinois; Wife Alleged Murderer

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Dec. 4 (AP)—Rolla (Blackie) Dean, ex-convict and former union business agent, was shot to death today at his home in Country Club Heights west of Belleville, and his wife was charged with murder.

The 54-year-old Dean, who had a record of more than 240 arrests and served six years in the Missouri prison on a robbery conviction 29 years ago, had been shot five times in the chest and arms.

Mrs. Dean, former St. Louis deputy sheriff and Democratic committeewoman, was quoted by officers as saying she shot her husband after they had quarreled and he had beaten her. She exhibited a bruise on the back of her head.

She said they began quarreling after visiting several taverns in East St. Louis last night.

"He hit me with his fists on the head," she said. "I went to our bedroom, got his revolver out of a dresser and started back to the kitchen.

"We met at opposite ends of the hallway. I pointed the revolver and pulled the trigger."

The Deans' 4-year-old daughter and Mrs. Dean's 18-year-old son by a previous marriage were in the house at the time.

Mrs. Dean, 38, wearing an expensive suit and fur jacket, was charged with murder in a warrant issued by a justice of the peace after she described the shooting to authorities at the St. Clair County state's attorney's office.

UN Okays Peaceful Atoms

In Endorsing Plan General Assembly Expresses Hope Of Its Immediate Operation

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Dec. 4 (AP)—By a rare unanimous vote, the U.N. General Assembly today endorsed President Eisenhower's atoms-for-peace program and expressed hope it would be put into operation without delay.

For the second time in the ninth General Assembly, the United States and the Soviet Union voted together—but only after Russia had lost a fight to link the program with the Security Council and the big power veto.

Eelco N. Van Kleffens, Assembly president, hailed the unanimous vote and said the entire world will rejoice that the Assembly has paved the way for achievements on a question that claims the interest in all countries "of citizens who hold the general welfare at heart."

One month ago the United States and Russia joined the 58 other U.N. members in a vote giving the U.N. Disarmament Commission a fresh start on work on a project for regulation and limitation of conventional armaments and prohibition of atomic weapons with adequate controls.

One year ago on Dec. 8, President Eisenhower electrified the Assembly with a dramatic plan for sharing atomic wealth for peace. By its action today the Assembly pushed the plan ahead.

The resolution gave final U.N. approval, noted that negotiations are in progress for the establishment of an international atomic energy agency "to facilitate the use by the entire world of atomic energy for peaceful purposes" and expressed the hope the agency "will be established without delay."

The resolution today suggested that once the agency is established it negotiate an appropriate form of agreement with the U.N.

On this point, the Assembly voted 43-5 against a Soviet proposal for the U.N. to recommend that the agency "be established as an agency responsible to the General Assembly and, in cases provided for by the charter of the United Nations, to the Security Council."

James J. Wadsworth, United States, said this proposal would "shackle the agency" with the veto. He made it clear the United States will not accept a veto on operations of the program.

The Assembly also decided an international technical conference of governments should be held before next August "in particular, to study the development of atomic power to consider other technical areas, such as biology, medicine, radiation protection, and fundamental science, in which the international cooperation might most effectively be accomplished."

The Russians attempted to widen this invitation to include all countries desiring to do so but were defeated, 36-6, with 18 abstentions. Burma joined with the five Soviet bloc countries for this move.

Crossroads Comment . . . by G.H.S.

Some whoops and hollers are being heard about extension of Sedalia's parking meters into residential areas, also some phases of proposed new traffic regulations which have been under study of a Citizens' Advisory Committee assisted by a traffic expert employed by the city.

Usually interest in such a subject warms up after ordinances have been passed and the laws are on the books. It seems time is at hand when citizens again may be too late with expostulations. Monday night city council will start considerations of a proposed new traffic ordinance. On the eve of this event, George M. Bryan, 903 East Fifth, writes to advise against too precipitous action by council. Episcopalians are uneasy lest the area around their church at Broadway and Ohio will be denied them for funeral purposes on week days and church services on Sunday. This and many other problems the advisory committee has toiled with; now it will be in the laps of councilmen.

Before this occurs Mr. Bryan would like them to listen to what he has to say as follows:

"On Monday evening, next, our City Council and Mayor will pass

StudiesHighway Plan to Spend $25 Billion

WASHINGTON, (AP)—A recommendation by the nation's governors that the federal government spend 25 billion dollars on a 10-year highway plan was being studied today for possible inclusion in President Eisenhower's 1955 legislative program.

Gov. Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana yesterday presented the plan to Eisenhower, who was reported "very pleased" with it. The program calls for building a nationwide interstate highway system and urges the states to match federal spending.

The governor's recommendations will be turned over to the President's advisory committee on a national highway program, which will study them before making its own suggestions to the White House.

Eisenhower is expected to include a highway program in his State of the Union message to Congress next month.

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, ret., chairman of the advisory committee, yesterday laid still another highway plan before the conference of mayors, here for a series of briefings by federal officials.

The program outlined by Clay would call for dederal spending of 26 billion dollars the next 10 years to supplement state and city highway projects.

Any plan would have to be approved by Congress.

The governor's plan would be an addition to normal state and federal highway spending. Kennon, chairman of the governors' conference, said the 10-year road program might thus reach 90 billions.

To provide a pension of $100 a month at age 60 requires a pension fund of $17,700 compared to $15,150 at ages 65 and $12,700 at age 70.

Gives Monthly Service Tally Of Its Units in November

The reports for the volunteer activities of the Service Groups for the month of November include 112 volunteers, 49 of whom are certificated, who served 450½ hours. Twelve canteen workers served 135 hours; twelve Gray Ladies, 103½ hours; Five motor, 92 hours; five production, 21 hours; ten social welfare aides, 65 hours; three staff aides, 40 hours; and seven nurse's aides, 75 hours. Some 119 were given home service. Sixty-three active service, 45 veterans and 11 civilians.

Mrs. J. E. Norlin, chairman, Gray Lady, and Mrs. L. E. Streckker, representing the officers' wives, have completed their respective schedules for Bothwell Hospital and the Sedalia Air Force Base.

Mrs. Herbert Zoernig, chairman, Nurse's Aides, has mailed schedules for the current month, together with assignments for the Nurse's Aides who will be on duty while the registered nurses have their Christmas party, Dec. 20, at Bothwell Hospital.

Mrs. Henry Lamm, Jr., chairman, Junior Red Cross, is urging all schools to turn in their enrollment records, as well as their gift boxes, as soon as possible. This is very important because it is necessary to have these in the office so that the schools may receive their copies of the Junior Red Cross magazine.

Michael Wolfel, chairman, first aid, met with the members of the Bryson Valley 4-H Club, at Bryson School, presenting the first aid program, and beginning the enrollment for a First Aid class early in the year. Other 4-H Club members are urged to take advantage of this Red Cross service and start their own training classes.

The co-ordinating committee, composed of Mrs. Harold Dean, Mrs. John Lamy, and Mrs. R. E. Broughton, representative from the officers wives at Sedalia Air Force Base, met in the office of E. A. Goodwin, Red Cross field director, together with the representatives from Warrensburg, to discuss the needs of further Red Cross service at the base.

Next time you bake potatoes, put some extra ones in the oven so you can use them for another family meal. Peel the cold baked potatoes, dice and add a well seasoned medium cream sauce; heat on top of the range. Sprinkle each serving with paprika and accompany with browned fully-cooked pork sausage links, a cooked vegetable such as peas or snap beans or a tossed green salad. Delicious for a quick lunch or supper!

The exciting new idea behind the motoramic Chevrolet

The Bel Air 4-Door Sedan—one of 14 new Fisher Body beauties in three new series

Maybe once in a car-buying lifetime, you come across something that breaks all the old patterns and establishes new ones. This is that kind of car. This is the true story of how Chevrolet and General Motors shaped a new idea in steel.

Like most good ideas, this one is pretty simple. But it wasn't an easy one to carry out. For Chevrolet and General Motors set out with the idea of building the first low-priced car that would do all these things:

- bring you the very freshest and finest styling to be had.
- bring you the most advanced engine design and engineering features.
- bring you the kind of performance and the kind of ride that have never been available before in a low-priced car.
- bring you the highest quality of manufacture and materials.

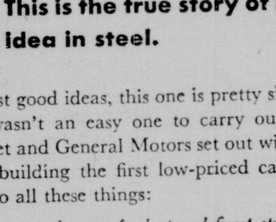
All this in Chevrolet's price field? That did take some doing! And isn't it logical that only Chevrolet and General Motors have the people, the skills, the resources and facilities, to carry out this exciting new concept? Here is how this new Chevrolet changes all your own ideas about cars!



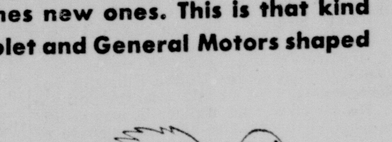
Real Show-Car Styling!

Your eye tells you the Motoramic Chevrolet is no styling "patch-up" job. A rakish, low profile . . . soft swiftness from its sleek rear fenders to its wide-eyed Sweep-Sight windshield . . . a new outlook for motoring. And that outlook doesn't change when you slip inside . . . there's more room for hats and hips . . . exciting fabrics and trim harmonized with the whole car . . . as carefully as a bride matches carpet to curtains.

A Sensational Ride!

You live the new idea instantly . . . you glide . . . actually glide because spherical joints "roll with the punch" of the road in Chevrolet's new Glide-Ride front suspension. And outrigger rear springs mean new balance in turns . . . turns made so effortless by new ball-race steering.

And when you stop suddenly, new Anti-Dive braking control checks that nosing down in front . . . you get more level stopping. Tubeless tires mean much greater protection against blowouts. And with new high-level ventilation there's fresher air.



Power Beyond Compare!

You also feel the new idea quickly . . . quick power like a panther's paw with the new "Turbo-Fire V8" (162 h.p.) and two new "Blue-Flame" 6's. And sparking this performance is a 12-volt electrical system giving you better ignition, faster starting, greater electrical reserve for any of the power assists you might desire. You have a transmission choice of economical Overdrive and improved, automatic Powerglide (optional at extra cost) or standard shift.

Even Air Conditioning!

And if you desire the convenience of power assists (optional at extra cost) . . . you'll find new power-steering and improved power brakes on all models. Power-controlled windows and powershift seat are available on the Bel Air and "Two-Ten" models, while air conditioning may be added on V8 models.

Won't You Try It?

Here, we can only tell you how successfully the Motoramic Chevrolet expresses the new idea behind it. But the car itself can quickly show you! Come in for a demonstration drive, won't you, first chance you get.

Mr. Lowe, a native of Paola, Kan., maintains a keen interest in civic and state activities and is an outstanding speaker. After graduating from South Dakota State College with a degree in electrical engineering, he took advanced work in the fields of education, chemistry and engineering. He coached athletics in high school and college for a number of years and then became associated with the General Electric Co., on its test course.

During the years with that company he was advanced to superintendent of the Small Appliance Manufacturing Division located at Bridgeport, Conn. While associated with General Electric, Lowe was dean of students and headed the physics department of Bridgeport Engineering Institute, a school that was conducted on a college level and carried on ing classroom work for several hundred students. Authority on Indian Legislation Succumbs

KANSAS CITY (AP) — George M. Tunison, 71, of Omaha, Neb., a prominent legal authority on Indian legislation, died yesterday at St. Luke's Hospital.

Tunison had practiced law in Omaha since 1908.

In 1939, after more than 26 years on the case, he recovered more than four million dollars for the Shoshone tribe of Indians in a claim against the federal government. The U. S. Supreme Court awarded him a fee of $459,490 in the case.

MENTIONED — Sen. Guy M. Gillette (D., Ia.), defeated for re-election, has been mentioned as the new Assistant Secretary of State for UN affairs. The appointment would probably be made by the Administration in an attempt to strengthen the bipartisan foreign policy.

Eisenhower's 'No!' Prevented Atomic Attack At Quemoy and Dienbienphu in Indo-China

TWIN HOT SPOTS where dropping A-bombs was considered b y military authorities but vetoed by President Eisenhower.

By Fred Sparks
NEA Staff Correspondent

TOKYO (AP) — Twice in recent months the United States has considered but rejected the use of baby A-bombs to stop further Red expansion in Asia. The "hot spots" were Quemoy and Dienbienphu.

The use against Red China of the junior-sized atomic weapons —which can destroy a particular part of a large city—may be considered again if Peiping grabs for somebody else's homeland.

(The above facts, revealed here for the first time, come when public indignation is at a high pitch in the United States because of the sentencing of 13 American airmen as spies by the Peiping government. At least one member of Congress has demanded a show of force.)

Despite any denials that might be issued, this correspondent has got the story nailed down—from those who planned the raids and those who would have made them.

The possibility of such an assault was known to the Moscow-Peiping duo. Accordingly, nothing here will assist the foe.

On both occasions it was President Eisenhower himself who ordered the proposed assaults cancelled.

(Washington pointed out that Mr. Eisenhower would not have to cancel any such proposal formally but that failure on his part to accept such an idea would be tantamount to cancellation. The Atomic Energy Act gives the President sole power to order the atomic arsenal unlocked.)

The first was during the siege of Dienbienphu. Our generals and admirals in the Orient were asked to suggest how the isolated fortress might be saved.

While some State-side politicians talked about sending American troops to Indo-China, the men on the spot here realized that by the time the GIs were unloaded the issue would have been decided.

They carefully developed a bombing pattern to ring Dienbienphu with baby A-bombs, make the surrounding hills so radioactive a curtain would protect General deCastries.

They were so convinced of their ability to draw a circle around Dienbienphu without endangering the defenders that one leading Air Force officer offered to parachute before the raid as an "observer."

Mr. Eisenhower said: "No!"

One of the reasons offered by the President was that he feared a popular reaction against the use of any kind of A-bomb—particularly in Japan, which was the recipient of the first two A-bombs dropped in history.

Since the President made the above point, Americans out here concerned with freedom's future in Asia have been urging the Pentagon to think up and advertise a new name for the baby A-bomb.

"They aren't A-bombs in the Hiroshima sense," an Air Force officer told me, "no more than a 1,000-pound blockbuster is a firecracker, although all explosives grew up from the Chinese firecracker."

The second time a baby atomic attack was suggested was when the Reds began to pound Quemoy, Formosa's offshore island, with artillery around the clock.

"There aren't enough American boys to make a ground attack on Red China; our allies aren't ready. Furthermore, traditional bombing would be costly and long ranged.

"Ours is a plan—via baby A-bombs—to knock out Red Chinese war potential in a matter of days without causing great numbers of civilian casualties."

Again Eisenhower said: "No!"—although the President was thus opposing a very large number of his militry advisers.

But the A-bombs are still conveniently stored, the planes are available, and the heartland of Red China is mapped down to the last traffic sign.

The owl was the badge of Ancient Athens.

There Is a Dampish Tinge to Weekend Weather Forecast

KANSAS CITY (AP)—There is a dampish tinge to the Missouri weather forecast today.

Mild temperatures and clear skies are giving way to increasing cloudiness and out of this the weather bureau expects some scattered showers tonight with rain in the east and showers in the west by Sunday

And some colder weather is on the way. There is a low pressure center over eastern Colorado, but the Weather Bureau fears that very little moisture will come of the system.

West Plains had the state's low this morning, a 27.

Sentences to Death Leader of Fanatical Moslem Brotherhood

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—A three-man military court today sentenced to death Hassan El Hodeiby, supreme guide of the fanatical Moslem brotherhood, and six other members of the outlawed organization.

The condemned men were charged with plotting to assassinate Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser and other officials and overthrow the government. They were arrested in a roundup of Brotherhood members after Nasser escaped an assassin's bullets at Alexandria Oct. 26.

The incident led to last month's ouster of Maj. Gen. Mohamed Naguib as Egypt's president.

PSC Authorizes Joplin Firm to Issue Bonds

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—The Missouri Public Service Commission has authorized Empire District Electric Co. of Joplin to issue and sell $3 million worth of 3¼ per cent first mortgage bonds due in 1984.

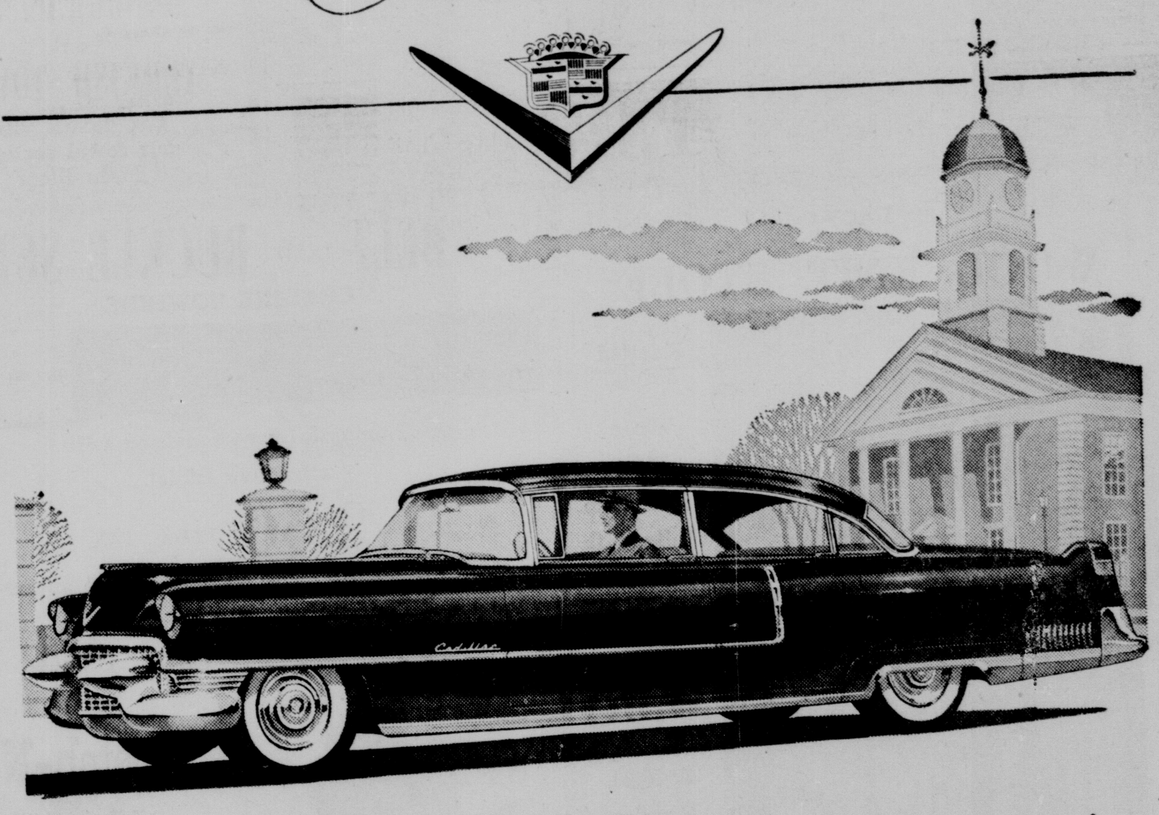
Cadillac



The Hour Every Motorist Owes to Himself!

The happy man you see in this picture is bringing himself up to date.

Cadillac has written a whole new chapter for the book defining motor car performance, and he's taking an hour to find out what it says.

And it says plenty—of very great importance.

First of all, it tells you what it's like to have command of a 250-horsepower engine that's as smooth as velvet, and so quick and eager that you have to educate your driving toe all over again.

It tells you what it's like to have virtually every unevenness in the highway completely eliminated before it is even noticeable to driver or passengers.

And it tells you what it's like to relax amidst upholstery fabrics and leathers that are found nowhere else, save in the 1955 Cadillac—not even in the finest clubs or hotels.

All this is to say, of course, that Cadillac has made another tremendous advance in design and engineering—so great, in fact, that only a drive and a personal inspection can let you realize its full significance.

And, naturally, there is yet greater emphasis on all the long-existing Cadillac virtues:

—the endurance that enables a Cadillac owner to keep his car just as long as he elects to do so . . . and with complete confidence in its dependability—

—the amazing economy of operation and upkeep which causes many owners to maintain that it is the most economical car on the American highway—

—the great personal satisfaction that comes from owning a car which is recognized, wherever highways lead, as the Standard of the World.

We cordially invite you to come in—today—to see and drive this wonderful, wonderful car.

There are eight models—in four different series—including the sensational Eldorado.

There is one to please you—exactly. And we think you'll be surprised and delighted at how little it costs, in comparison with lesser cars.

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

CARIO, Egypt— (NEA) — Red subversion, like the all-devouring Biblical plague, continues to haunt the strife-torn Arab world.

While the Kremlin rulers preach "coexistence" in the West they feverishly prepare for new Korea-style explosions in the Middle East.

The ruling military junta in Egypt—more than two years after the overthrow of King Marouk—is literally fighting for its life against an unholy alliance of Communists and the fanatical Moslem Brotherhood.

"Communism, widespread corruption and semi-starvation are the chief threat to the uneasy stability in the Middle East." Major Salah Calem, Egypt's Minister of National Guidance, told NEA Service.

"The urgent need in Egypt, as everywhere in the Moslem countries, is a higher living standard—a speed-up in social an economic development," he said.

Major Salem, at 34, is a dynamic little man, permaturely bald and with glowing fanatical eyes set deep in their sockets. He is widely regarded as one of the strong men in the Revolutionary Council that seized power in Egypt in 1952.

Th other "strong man" is Lt. Col. Camal Abdel Nasser, Egypt's Premier, who—at the age of 37—is one of the "older" men among the country's present rulers.

For close to 10 years, Salah Salem and his group of young idealistic army officers plotted secretly the overthrow of King Foroux. Now that he is in power—ruling from the plush chambers of the ex-King's palace—he finds it difficult to square the romance of revolution with the grim facts of life. Like an acrobat who has lost his balance, the young Major and his military junta remain dangerous suspended over a political knife-edge.

"Egypt must fight twin evils of communism and hunger," Salah Salem emphasized again at the close of our interview.

Just as communism used nationalist sentiment in Indo-China to gain sentiment there, the Soviet rulers are taking advantage of the strang nationalism that exists in the Arab countries.

Their easiest political tool is a hate campaign against the foreigner, especially Israel. Egypt's misfortune is ascribed to the sinister "Anglo-American and Zionist imperialists" and their "native stooges"—the pro-Western "traitors."

"Alla wa Akbar," cry the hungry and frienzied Arabs in the streets and Oriental Market places.. "God is great and give us the word to fight the foreigner." The aggressive power of the mob still rules the capital cities of the Middle East.

For the present, it seems, Premiar Nasser, Salah Salem and their military junta have the upper hand in Egypt. They are strong anti-Communist and their platform for Egypt's rebirth is as simple as it is profound.

They say: the living standards of the workers and rural fellahs cannor be raised without the development of Egypt's capital resources.

The revolutionary military junta — left alone by the other Arab states and the corrupt leaders of the Moslem League—would probably conclude peace with Israel—so as to take advantage of Israel's industrial "know-how."

Since the revolt against Farouk there has been a marked decline in hostility towards Israel in Egypt. Competent observers discount the idea that the Arab refugees who left Palestine during Israeli-Arab conflict are a serious obstacle to friendly relations between Israel and Egypt.

The close to 900,000 refugees, to be sure, remain an explosive element in the Middle East. Under the care of UN's Works and Relief Agency, the majority of them live under much better conditions than the average employed Egyptian worker or peasant. But they remain a haunting and challenging human problem for the free world.

A prominent Western diplomat, one of the wisest in the Middle East, said: "With some good will on both sides the tragic refugee question could have been settled long ago."

However, the diplomat added: "Some Arab politicians prefer to keep the whole question in the air. They can always use the refugees to blackmail the United States.

Will Use Two Kinds Of Highway Surfaces

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—The Kansas Turnpike Authority has voted to surface part of the Kansas City-Oklahoma state line superhighway with concrete and the remainder with asphaltic concrete or "black top."

The concrete surface will be installed on the 55-mile stretch between Topeka and Kansas City and the asphaltic concrete on the 181 miles from Topeka to the Oklahoma line.

Members of the authority said it is estimated this combination of surfaces will cost at least $500,000 less than would exclusive use of one or the other types of pavement on the entire route.

Police Give Pressmen Of Three Florida Newspapers Protection

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—Pressmen of three Sarasota newspapers have been given police protection after officers reported receiving word of plans to beat up some of the press room workers.

Detective Arthur E. Johnson said a roustabout at the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus reported he had been contacted by men who told them they wanted to have the pressmen at the papers roughed up.

Johnson added that the roustabout said the men told him they "wanted to have some arms and legs broken so workers would be off the job at least six weeks."

The papers are the Sarasota Herald-Tribune, a morning paper, and Sarasota Journal, an afternoon paper, both published by David B. Lindsay; and the Sarasota News of which Kent McKinley is the publisher.

Says Cabinet Splits Over Long-Range Plan Of Grants and Loans

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Times says President Eisenhower's Cabinet is split over a proposed long-range program of economic grants and loans as the free world's chief weapon in the "cold war."

In a dispatch from Washington by John D. Morris, the Times says Secretary of State Dulles and Harold E. Stassen, director of the Foreign Operations Administration, "have encountered stiff opposition" to the plan from Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey.

"President Eisenhower himself may have to settle the argument," the newspaper said, adding that a decision is likely "within a few weeks."

The newspaper said Humphrey is "sympathetic" to the use of economic aid as a cold war weapon, especially in Asia, "but he feels that this can be done without increasing United States outlays."

Humphrey, the Times says, "favors a gradual reduction of military and economic aid to Asia, now running at about one billion dollars a year."

The newspaper says Humphrey, Dulles and Stassen "apparently agree that some European countries, with their own economies now in excellent shape, should help the economic development of Asia."

"Whether a United States-European program might be devised is another question," the story said.

Two Killed

said inquest into the accident was not necessary.

Mrs. Rollie Thomas, 59, of Route 2, LaMonte, was severely injured about 4:15 p. m. Saturday when the car her husband was driving and a truck driven by W. H. Byers, 55, collided at the junction of Highway 127 and 16th Street (50 Highway detour).

The Thomas' were riding in their 1952 Plymouth sedan west on 16th and Byers was driving south on 127 toward Green Ridge. The cars collided at the intersection, the truck was driven to the west as Byer was trying to get away from the Plymouth, while the Plymouth went to the east into the roadside ditch, snapping a post holding the Highway Stop Sign. The truck stopped west of the ditch and along the fence row, barely missing the fence.

Mrs. Thomas was thrown from the car and apparently was rolled between the truck and her car.

She was brought to Sedalia in the Ewing ambulance and taken to the Woodland Hospital where Dr. R. A. Enochs rendered medical treatment. She was admitted to the hospital apparently suffering from bruises on the right side, chest hurts and traumatic injury to the spine and pelvis.

Chamberlin's wrecker towed the car to Sedalia.

An accident two miles west of Sedalia on 16th St., (Highway 50 detour) resulted in injuries to one person and considerable damage to one motor vehicle. The accident occurred about 5 p. m. Saturday.

Gordon M. Kelley, Jr., 20, driver of a 1946 Chevrolet sedan suffered painful back injuries and a fracture of the pelvis when his automobile overturned.

Kelley reported to Sgt. E. W. Van Winkle and Trooper Pete Stohr he was driving west on the highway heading for his home in LaMonte when the mishap occurred.

It had been raining and the highway was extremely slippery in the immediate area. He said he felt his car seem to hit a dip or soft spot and applying the brakes it started skidding, went off the right side of the highway and turned over on its top. He said he had to crawl to a back window, roll it down, through which he escaped the car.

Kelley was rushed to the Woodland Hospital here in Sedalia in the McLaughlin ambulance. Dr. R. A. Enoch attended the injury youth and rendered emergency treatment. He was admitted to the hospital.

The car which was badly damaged was taken to the Hamlin service station by the Hamlin wrecker.

Chester Ballew, 38, of Route 2, Independence, Mo., suffered painful injuries about 8 p. m. Saturday when his car left the highway about 20 miles south of Sedalia on Highway 65.

Ballew was driving to "Martin's Ford" to go duck hunting and as he started into a curve he applied his brakes. He reported the left front brake seemed to lock and he began to fight the steering wheel. The car left the highway and plunged down a deep embankment, and was demolished.

Ballew reported he tried to stop four or five cars to get assistants and to get a ride into town. A passing motorists stopped, whose name he failed to obtain, and brought him to Sedalia to the Woodland Hospital.

Dr. Glenn Walker treated the injured man who was suffering from several lacerations on his face. He also was complaining of chest and back injuries. He was admitted to the hospital to remain over night.

Two Sedalia Air Force Base airmen, A/1C Robert Howell, 20, and A/2C Dale Racicot, 21, were injured in a one-car accident Saturday afternoon about 3.7 miles east of Warrensburg on U. S. Highway 50 in which the car was demolished.

Howell and Racicot suffered multiple scratches and bruises.

The accident occurred about 3 p. m. as Howell was driving his 1950 Pontiac east on Highway 50.

According to reports Howell had started to pass a car ahead of him, when at the same time that car began to pass the one in front of it. The cars were approaching a bridge and as Howell swung off the left side of the highway to avoid hitting the other auto, his machine hit the bridge. His car then bounced to the right side of the bridge and back again. Hitting the left side of the bridge the last time, the auto carromed off the highway in a southeasterly direction, down a 20-foot embankment and through the woods for about 375 feet, finally stopping, toppled on its right side in a shallow ravine. According to Deputy Sheriff Bill Fortney of Warrensburg who made the investigation, the machine had apparently rolled over several times. The two boys were either thrown out or jumped out, and were left by the auto about halfway between where it stopped and the highway.

Howell was taken to the Air Base hospital by another airman and Racico was taken there by a Base hospital vehicle.

A wrecker towed the car to Warrensburg.

Mrs. Jacqulin Jones, wife of Joe Jones, 1301 South Lamine, and Miss Diana Harms, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Harms, Cole Camp, received minor bruises and cuts in an accident at Third and Osage about 11:05 p.m. Saturday.

Jones was driving his Ford coupe south on Osage and Harms was driving his Chevrolet tudor east on Third when the cars collided. The right side of the Ford car was smashed in and the door window broken while the front end of the Chevrolet was damaged.

The injured girls were taken to the Bothwell hospital in the Ewing ambulance where Dr. Pete Siegel rendered medical treatment.

playing a pipe organ, the organ made of the white foam block, the pipes of white candles and at the front choir boys. The white yarn dolls were attracting attention, too, and the impish Santa made of cotton and angel hair, with a red funnel for his cap.

The door pieces were cute, one with a big Santa head, with Christmas tree balls for his pink cheeks and small blue ones for his eyes. Another piece had Santa mitts and snowballs and then there was a huge red stocking filled with gifts and a candy cane. A very different one was made of gilt oak leaves and gold Christmas balls.

On the Junior Garden Club table could be found almost anything made from anything. Tiny Christmas wreaths made from fruit jar rubbers, a ribbon tree decorated with popcorn, little corsages, and among the assortment of things used for everything from angels to tree ornaments were paper doilies, ribbon, greenery, pipe cleaner, spools and many other things.

It is a beautiful show the Garden Club members have offered to the people of this area. Mrs. Don Anderson is chairman of the show and Mrs. J. W. Boger is president of the Garden Club Council.

Two Programs On Surplus Goods Conflict

(Editor's Note: For many schools and hospitals around the country, the stream of free or low-cost supplies and equipment from war surplus material had become an economic lifeline. Suddenly, this year, the stream was cut off. Here's why.)

By SIGRID ARNE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—Officials at a covey of little schools scattered through 320 square miles of Ozark hills wrote Sen. Symington (D-Mo) in distress.

They had thought they were to get electric lights, but now it appeared their plans were stalled.

Power was available; the schools were hoping to get the fixtures through the federal government's school and hospital donation program, from federal surplus goods.

They would have had to pay only for hauling the fixtures—which they couldn't afford to buy—from some military depot.

However, they found the fixtures were not free any more. They had to buy them, like anyone else.

"What's happened?" the Ozark people asked.

It was this:

Two separate congressional programs concern surplus material. In some respects, one acted against the other—creating a snarl that has brought more than 30,000 letters of complaint in recent weeks.

In 1948, Congress said all surplus goods held by government agencies—from tack hammers to desks and from hotel-size refrigerators to obsolete planes—should be processed for use or sale. A department which had stuff it didn't need notified other government agencies. They could take what they wanted. What was left was surplus, available to schools and hospitals. What was still left would be sold as junk.

But Congress also ordered the Defense Department—which this year is spending 35 billion dollars—to adopt a revision of its buying program. And 90 per cent of the surplus goods was held by defense agencies.

These changes put military supply agencies under the same sort of business-like operation that governs department stores. Books must be kept to show the value of everything on hand. Accounts must show how each item is used, and the price when an item is sold.

On Feb. 1 the Defense Department issued "Regulation 7420.1," which became the center of the battle between the schools and the military. This regulation states that all supply depots must be paid for goods leaving their warehouses.

That just about dried up the donation program to schools and hospitals.

Wilfred J. McNeil, Defense Department comptroller, said he knew it would, but under the law there was nothing else to do.

Some agents here from various states studying the situation have expressed doubt that all surplus sales pay for themselves, but McNeil said the defense agencies are getting an average 7 per cent return on surplus goods they sell.

"Figures on sales vary," he says. "We'll get as little as 2 per cent of the cost of some items, up to 44 per cent on construction materials. On goods which have civilian value — like refrigerators, recreation equipment, construction material — we'll average 35 per cent."

As a result of the conflict, the next Congress may be asked to decide what it meant in the first place by the school donation program. At least one state surplus property agent says he is ready to ask it to do so.

Your family will love carrots if you prepare them this way. Slice about six good-sized carrots and cook them in a small amount of boiling salted water until they are tender-crisp; drain off any small amount of water remaining in the pan. Now heat a couple of tablespoons each of honey and butter or margarine along with a teaspoon of grated orange rind; add the drained sliced cooked carrots and simmer until piping hot. Add salt to taste and serve at once.

Tubeless Tire Is Taking Over In Auto World

Editors—The tubeless tire is a feature of the new automobiles, and the rubber companies expect it to take over the replacement market too. For a close look at this comparatively new product, the Associated Press turned to a writer at the heart of the industry.

By JOSEPH KUEBLER
Industrial Editor,
The Akron Beacon Journal

AKRON, Ohio, Dec. 4 (AP)—Tire industry executives estimate that in anywhere from three to five years, the inner tube will be a thing of the past.

Virtually all 1955 passenger automobiles will be equipped with tubeless tires.

Small trucks and airplanes are being equipped with the tubeless variety now, in considerable numbers.

In the case of the big trucks, a technical problem of developing an airtight rim has been delaying matters, but one manufacturer says it has that problem licked.

Among passenger cars, the only present exception to the tubeless trend is the occasional car with wire wheels. It is not very economical to make that type of wheel airtight.

The "big four" producers of the industry are swinging heavily to tubeless production. They are Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., B. F. Goodrich Co., Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and U. S. Rubber Co.

Goodrich has revealed that 75 per cent of its passenger tire capacity now is assigned to production of the tubeless tire. Not long ago Goodyear estimated its output was 50 per cent tubeless and that the percentage would climb rapidly.

Tubless tires can be used on any passenger car, old or new, that has 15 inch rims in good condition. Even if there are dents in the rims, it still is possible to use the new tires if the dents can be smoothed out enough to make an airtight connection.

To the motorist buying a tire, the tubeless variety looks pretty much like the conventional kind. But it is a great deal different in construction.

All tires are made in plies—four, or six, or more. That means there are four or more layers of fabric to form the body of the casing. The big job of the tire engineers was to make the plies airtight.

In an ordinary casing, if there were no tube, air would seep through the plies, causing them to separate. Then the tire would go flat.

There have been two principal approaches to the solution of this problem.

Goodrich vulcanizes an inner liner of butyl rubber—a synthetic which is used to make inner tubes—to the tire. It has obtained a patent on this liner and has brought suit in two courts charging infringement of patents against Firestone and U. S. Rubber.

Butyl has high air retention qualities but is difficult to vulcanize to other synthetics or natural rubber.

Goodyear has gotten away from an inner liner, at least of butyl. Using a plastic solution, it treats the fabric that is the base for each ply. Then the fabric is given a rubber coating before each ply is cemented together.

The other distinguishing feature of the tubeless tire is a series of special ridges along the beard. The beard is the heavy edge of the casing, which fits against the edge of the rim. These ridges—of various sizes and styles and types of rubber—press against the rim and flatten out, creating an airtight seal.

The amount of air pressure in a tubeless tire need not be any higher than for a conventional tire. In their tests of the tubeless type, engineers have dropped the air pressure to as low as five pounds and still have not been able to rip the tires off the rim.

Repairing a tubeless tire presents no great problem. U. S. rubber has put on the market a repair gun which will enable ordinary punctures to be repaired without removing the tubeless tire from the wheel. The gun is about the size of a tube of toothpaste and contains a semi-liquid rubber sealant.

What about the price?

Tubeless tires are more difficult to build. There are more operations. They take a bit longer to cure or vulcanize, so production is somewhat slower.

However, the tire coming out on the new automobiles are the same price as the conventional combination of tire and tube.

For several years Goodrich and Firestone had a premium tubeless on the market. List prices on these premium items were anywhere from 30 to 100 per cent above the prices for regular tires.

These premium tires have a layer of sealant — a soft rubber—attached to the inside, under the treads, to give them sealing without the sealant are being used as original equipment for the 1955 automobiles.

The men who make tires say the tubeless kind gives a better ride to the passenger, and the automobile engineers go along with that idea.

But a greater advantage claimed by the tire engineers is better protection from blowouts. Usually blowouts result from a abrasion of the cords in the fabric — followed by friction against the tube.

Furthermore, there is a reason why — other reasons being equal—the tubeless tire should give more mileage. Heat is the worst enemy of a tire, including the heat developed within the tire as it is being used. And the tubeless tire runs from 10 to 15 per cent cooler than the older type.

Movies Show Mays Peeked In Making Greatest Catch

By Frank Eck

Willie Mays fooled 52,751 fans, including Joe DiMaggio, when he made one of the greatest catches in World Series history. But the amazing Giant ball hawk couldn't fool the motion picture camera.

When Cleveland's Vic Wertz hit his 450-foot drive to centerfield in the opening game of the World Series in the Polo Grounds, DiMaggio, in summing up the catch, said:

"Mays just turned his back to the plate and ran."

Joe inferred that Mays never got a second look at the ball. Most of the fans and sports writers saw the catch the same way and the talk after the game-saving catch had almost everyone saying:

"How did he do it?"

Some TV viewers thought they saw Mays get a second glimpse of the ball just before he caught it. Still photos fail to back up this theory.

However, the play from the time the ball left Wertz's bat, has been recorded for posterity. It was filmed by a newsreel cameraman and is part of an eight-minute production called "Willie Mays Sportscope" and is being shown throughout the country.

The catch is the highlight of the 725-foot film. Mays, while running, can be seen turning his head to get a look at the ball over his left shoulder. His judgment and timing were perfect. The film shows that Mays' catch was anything but lucky. He had "it" all the way, as they say in the trade.

Some onlookers thought Mays fell after making the catch — it happened so fast. Actually, Mays fell after making his skyrocket throw back to the infield. The catch saved two runs and the throw prevented slow-footed and injured Al Rosen from advancing to second base, although Larry Doby went from second to third.

Chances are this catch will highlight the hot stove season, especially when word gets around that a perfect sequence is available.

"We have what we consider a good shot of the Mays catch," says Lew Fonseca, who directs the major league movie shown annually to millions of kids in many parts of the world. "However, if what RKO-Pathe has is better than ours we would certainly be interested in using it."

Fonseca usually has three camera crews on hand at each World Series game and they seldom miss dramatic action. Thus, the upcoming baseball movie figures to be in demand, not only to see how Mays made his great catch but also how Dusty Rhodes pinch hits against right-handed pitchers.

Work Begins On New Lincoln Tunnel Tube

WEEHAWKEN, N.J., Dec. 4 (AP)—Followers of men who braved injury, death and financial ruin in pursuit of a dream are at work again in heavy air forced into the mud and silt under one of America's great rivers.

They are pushing beneath tons of Hudson River water and holding back dangerous seeping earth to build a giant new tube to the Lincoln Tunnel linking midtown New York City and New Jersey.

It's nothing new now, this tunneling under rivers. But the genius of many men and the lives of many workers went into the know-how that makes it possible to tunnel under a mile-wide river.

The rapid growth of the New York metropolitan area has spelled the need for the latest engineering feat, a 100-million-dollar project that already has been two years in planning and which will not be completed until 1957.

The first tunnelunder the Hudson, completed in 1904, took almost 30 years and saw the financial collapse of two construction firms.

The Port of New York Authority, mammoth New York-New Jersey agency which operates major port facilities, is footing the bill for the new tube.

Its major construction started early last month, when a huge steel shield, like a giant can, 18 feet long and 31.2 feet around, weighing 240 tons, started a forward push under the Hudson.

Propelled slowly by 28 hydraulic jacks, each with a force of 200 tons, the shield pushes back the river mud while workmen within its protective hulk build the shell of the latest tunnel.

There workmen will be using all of the safety devices and practices learned through death and disaster which always have marched hand in hand with intrepid sandhogs—the nickname of tunnel workers.

The British, led by French engineer Marc Isambard Brunel, built the first underwater tunnel on the Thames River, an 18-year project that cost 2½ million dollars.

From the British came the major tools of today's tunnelers—Brunel's shield invention and the idea patented by Lord Cochrane in 1830 for use of compressed air.

The compressed air theory is that eater can be kept out of an underwater tunnel by sufficient air of greater pressure.

The theory was fine, but the practical problems were legion.

The first major underwater tunnel constructed with the aid of compressed air was started by a wealthy Western railroader, De Witt Clinton Haskins, who got the idea of putting a railroad tunnel under the Hudson.

As its use was perfected there were spectacular accidents, a new occupational disease was born and new labor laws had to be passed.

The "blowout" is one of the most serious hazards of compressed air work. It occurs when a weak spot develops in the mud layer around the tunnel or in the tunnel excavation itself. The compressed air rushes through and escapes in great bubbles to the surface above. The tunnel can cave in or be flooded.

The worst accident in underwater tunnel history occurred about 1880 when just such a blow occurred during the early construction of the Hudson River tunnel now used by the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad.

Eight men escaped to an air lock as water poured into the excavation, but 20 others were killed.

The accident served to dramatize the plight of the sandhog.

When a British firm came along eight years later to take up the Hudson tunnel project when Haskins ran out of funds, its superintendent, E. W. Moir, said tunnel workmen "had died at the rate of 25 per cent per annum and nobody seemed to care anything about it."

Many deaths were due a unique illness known popularly as the "bends" and later termed "caisson disease."

Medical experts explain that the blood absorbs an increased amount of oxygen and nitrogen under increased air pressure. If rapid decompression takes place, bubbles of gas form in the blood more rapidly than the gas can be cast off by the lungs. This can cause discomfort, pain, unconsciousness, collapse and in extreme cases, death.

Moire devised the first use of a hospital air lock. Here sandhogs could be recompressed and slowly returned to normal pressure.

The hospital lock since has been used universally on compressed air work. The port authority installed a $60,000 medical unit, including a hospital air lock, at the site of the new tube to provide 24-hour medical aid.

Refers to Display Of GOP Advertising As 'Horror Chamber'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Democratic National Committee yesterday referred to its exhibition of Republican campaign advertising from the recent election as a "chamber of horrors."

Republicans gave their answer to the display in a statement identifying President Eisenhower and his party "with the highest ideals."

Stephen A. Mitchell, retiring chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said Eisenhower promised that communism would not be an issue in the recent congressional elections but that the subject had been used extensively by Vice President Nixon and other GOP campaigners.

The committee, meeting here to choose Mitchell's successor, opened an exhibition of pictures used by some Republican candidates. Generally, the pictures accused Democrats of being soft toward communism. The committee called the exhibition a "chamber of horrors."

"That is the way to run a war of extermination against the American people," Mitchell said. "Speaking after we have won a great victory — and there is no suspicion that sour grapes enters into it — I say that I am mad about it and I am going to be mad for a long time."

James L. Hiltenberg Retires After 20 Years With MoPac

James L. Hiltenberg, who served the Missouri-Pacific in various capacities for a period of 20 years, has retired and is devoting his time to his farm adjoining the city limits on the Tower Street road.

During his service he was first a car inspector for a period of two years, then a brakeman and lastly in the paint department at the company shops.

Mr. Hiltenberg was born on a farm near Clifton City and came to Sedalia in 1910 starting to work for the MKT. Two years later, in 1912, he went to the Missouri-Pacific. He was a locomotive painter until 1930, when he moved to a farm near LaMonte, spending 15 years there, and in 1945 returned to the shops in the same capacity.

Then he and his wife, Mrs. Mildred Hiltenberg, moved to a farm of 30 acres they purchased and on which they reside. There he has a good-sized pond stocked with fish and in his more leisure time intends to do fishing whenever an impulse for such develops.

James L. Hiltenberg

He is father of two children, Clarence Hiltenberg, Smithton, employed at the shops, and a daughter, Mrs. George Simpson, near Nelson.

His retirement before the first of the coming year was prompted by an injury to his hip last January in a fall that caused him to use crutches in getting about after he was out of a hospital.

Now he, with the able assistance of his wife, Mildred operates the farm and they have a small herd of pure bred Black Angus cattle which had been reduced from a much larger one because of the drought during the summer, to cut down feed costs.

They plan continuing light farming, and former fellow-workers and friends declare they are making a success of their endeavors.

At the time of his retirement, shops workers presented him with an expensive wrist watch and also with a hat that is one of the best procurable.

Training Plane Aids Two Jets in Rising

WIESBADEN, Germany (AP)—Two U.S. Saberjets, stalled on a tiny airstrip in Sardinia, borrowed a breeze from a training plane to take off, the Air Force reported today.

The jets were en route to Tripoli when they set down at Cagliari, Sardinia, because of minor fuel difficulties. They couldn't get off again because the strip has no jet starting unit.

Maj. Charles E. (Chuck) Yeager, famed Air Force test pilot, hopped into a T33 jet trainer at Ramstein Air Base in Germany and flew to Cagliari.

He put his little trainer about 15 feet in front of the first jet's air intake and let his tailpipe exhaust do the rest. The second Saber start was as smooth. Both pilots took off and Yeager flew home again.

Some of the people who were his customers at the beginning of his store operation are still coming in — proof that they have been satisfied customers down through the years. In 1946, Mr. Scott formed a partnership with his son, Victor E. Scott, who today is active in the business and has taken over much of the management. They thank the people of the Sedalia community for making their long business history possible, and invite them to visit their modern store for all their book shop needs.

This week we celebrate our 46th Anniversary! For forty-six years we have served the people of this community in the same business in the same location. Actually, this has been a book store location for more than seventy-five years. The business was started in the early 1880's by W. H. Ramsey, who was succeeded by West and Norton in 1892. Later Mr. West managed the business as the sole owner and continued until 1908, when it was purchased by Mr. A. R. Scott, who has successfully operated it until the present time.

Hymn of Month Is Selected By Music Club

The hymn of the month for December is "How Brightly Beams the Morning Star," the text of which was written by the Rev. Philip Nicolai, 1599. The music is by Johann Sebastian Bach.

Out of sorrow came this wonderful hymn in 1597. A pestilence came to Westphalia and few families escaped without the loss of one or more loved ones. Philip Nicolai, author and composer of the hymn, was pastor at Wuna and he sat in his study weary and despondent. He lifted his heart to God and found comfort in his sorrow. Cares were forgotten and the inspiration came to pen the lines of this wonderful poem.

This melody, which has been called the queen of choral, may have been suggested by earlier melodies. Johann Sebastian Bach used it in one of his greatest organ preludes and also included it in one of his cantatas.

For Pleasant Expression, Face Must Be Relaxed

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Some women tend to overwork the pleasant - facial - expression theme. If you've seen any number of women, you've seen the face of affected radiance. You've also seen the empty, insincere smile.

Then, too, there's the woman who goes through each day and the daily contacts it offers her, ignoring the importance of a nice facial expression. She rarely smiles, and with her lips pressed tightly together, her expression is one of grave seriousness.

She is unaware of the fact that her lips set the scene for her facial expression. And at first glance, she creates the impression of being very unhappy, and without a sense of humor.

To present a pleasant expression that's indicative of warm and happy personality is very simple. The key and method is contained in just a half-dozen words: Keep the corners of your lips up.

When applying your lipstick, remember to fill in the corners of your mouth. Keep your lipstick as neat and as well applied as you can. If your lips tend to crack or dry, there's a new lipstick containing a softening ingredient you may want to try.

In addition to its softening ingredient, the makers of this new lipstick claim it's pleasant-tasting, and contains indelium, too, for lasting color without drying your lips.

Three Are Chosen for Poetry Interpretation Tournament

By Larry Owen

The final elimination contest in interpretation of poetry, for the speech tournament at William Chrisman High School, Independence, Dec. 10-11, was held in Room 103 the fifth and sixth hours on Tuesday. The results were: first, Marilyn Garrett; second, Marcia Rissler; and third, Karen Crosslin.

The junior student council held its regular meeting Tuesday after school in the room of its sponsor, Miss Hazel Gray. The meeting was called to order by the president, Leland Payton. This meeting was routine.

Wednesday morning the junior high school held its bi-weekly assembly. After the opening ritual Leland Payton introduced the mistress of ceremony, Miss D'Anne Brougher. Tom Austin played a piano solo, "That Old Feeling." Reports were given about men who had their birthdays in December. The following gave them: presidents, Marshall Bryan; baseball players, Ned Kehde; artists, Mary Jane Petree; scientists, Gene Smith; authors, Gene Gant; other famous men who have birthdays in December, Sharlene Davis.

The boys in Miss Riner's home room sang a group number, "Joshua Fit De Battle of Jericho," with Kenneth Williams and Marshall Bryan taking the melody. They were accompanied by Tom Austin. Susan Schien, accompanied by Judy Case, played a violin solo, "Her Kiss." Charles Robinson played a saxophone solo, "Harbor Lights," accompanied by Tom Austin. In closing the class sang "Silent Night."

The "L" Club initiation will be held Monday through Wednesday evening of this coming week. All incoming members will dress and do as required by last year's initiatees. Bobby Case is president of the "L" Club.

The girls sextet was announced on Friday. The following were chosen: Janet Ragar, Elinor Van Dyke, Clo Greer, Cay Carrel, Sandra Baker, and Linda Bradley. These girls will sing at service clubs this year and in music contests for Smith-Cotton.

Eight Sedalians Attend Scout, Explorer Dance

Eight Sedalians attended the annual Senior Girl Scout-Explorer Boy Scout dance held in the ballroom of the Missouri Hotel in Jefferson City last Friday. Those attending from here were: Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Farley, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Linn, Larry Owen, Beverly Carl, Deanna Lyles, and Dick Wherley.

Sedalia, Marshall, Windsor, Osage Beach, Camdenton, Otterville, and Jefferson City were represented by either Explorer Scouts or Senior Girl Scouts. There were approximately 200 in attendance.

Music was by the Norman Kolar orchestra through local 217 Federated Musicians. Dancing was on the main ballroom floor. The decorations were in Christmas scenes of snow, trees and tinsel. Refreshments were served.

During an intermission, Paul Doll, chairman of advancement in the Lake of the Ozarks Council, called Gerald Smith, Marshall, to the speaker's stand and ceremoniously presented him with the highest award in Explorer Scouting, the Silver Award. This was the only presentation of the evening.

The arrangements were made for the dance by the Jefferson City Girl Scout Council and the Lake of the Ozarks Council, B.S.A., of the Cole District. The executive of the Lake Ozarks Council is L. E. Moody of Jefferson City. The two field scout executives are Bob Burt, Jefferson City and Louis Linn, Sedalia. Mrs. F. T. Williams is the Girl Scout executive.

An air lift that carried 138,700 passengers and 170,343,000 pounds of freight was used to build the railroad which taps the newly developed Labrador-Quebec iron deposit.

Hal Boyle's Column—

Reveals the Latest Thing In Men's Pajamas---Ladies

NEW YORK (AP) — Guess what's the latest thing in men's pajamas.

Well, sir, it's the ladies.

"Eighty-six per cent of the pajamas sold today are bought by women," said N. J. Lovell, director of the Men's Pajama Institute.

The 125-million-dollar-a-year industry, now booming again, will market 30 million pairs of men's pajamas by the end of 1954, double the number of only five years ago.

"A lot of single girls now buy small - sized men's pajamas for their own use, too. Only reason we can find is that they feel more comfortable—roomier in the seat and chest."

Be that as it may, Lovell is annoyed than an estimated 58 million American men still buy only half a pair of pajamas a year, although he contends that in dollar volume sleep wear has replaced neckties as the most popular Christmas gift.

The pajama industry has had more wrinkles—no pun intended—in its sales charts than the silhouette of a roller coaster.

An ancient war launched pajamas, but modern wars have crimped their popularity. Hollywood has helped and hurt them.

No one can be sure just who invented pajamas, as the Russians have failed as yet to stake out their claim in this field.

But they first achieved fame as a military uniform. About 100 A.D. Emperor Wau-Tie of China built up a cavalry brigade to stop the raids of mountain nomads. His cavalrymen found the draped garments of that day a nuisance in the saddle, and developed the pajama trouser so they could ride more easily.

"Pajamas became part of the clothing issue of the ... horsemen," said Lovell wryly, "and if they had been part of the government issue to 14,000,000 American servicemen in the last world war our troubles would be over today."

Pajamas spread quickly from China to India, where they were soon widely adopted and worn for centuries for every purpose—except sleeping. The British adopted them, and they made their debut in England as sleeping garments and were called "puyjams."

About 1870 they were introduced into America as "pajamas", and were viewed at first by our hardy folk with the same deep suspicion they showed for the first bathtubs. They still clung to nightshirts and nightcaps.

Theater matinee idols who wore pajamas in bedroom farces first convinced Mr. and Mrs. America that these colorful sleeping garments weren't the devil's boudoir bait. And when Rudolph Valentino wore them in a film, they became the rage.

But the war—plus the bragging of later Hollywood stars (actresses as well as actors) that they preferred sleeping in their birthday suits—cut pajama sales steeply.

"The idea got around that real he-men always slept raw," said Lovell sternly. "That's silly."

Bullis Says Congress Change Won't Change Family Menu

By Gaynor Maddox
NEA Food & Markets Editor

NEW YORK—In terms of kitchen politics, Democratic control of Congress means no less food in the family menu; maybe more.

That is the opinion of Harry A. Bullis, board chairman of General Mills, prominent Minnesota Eisenhower Republican and vice-chairman of the Committee for a National Trade Policy.

"The recent elections will have very little, if any, effect on the upward course of our economic conditions," Bullis said in an interview with NEA Service.

"We are only on the threshold of a great advance. President Eisenhower's policies have carried us successfully through a period of economic adjustment. As a result of those policies, the American economic picture looks bright and dynamic."

* * *

He pointed out that the administration's program on tax reduction, easing of credit, social security and agriculture have strengthened the American family's budget.

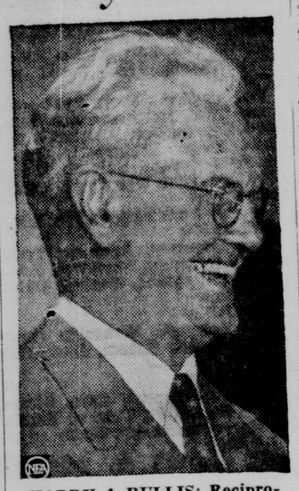
"But we cannot forget," he stressed, "that during the past year the Democratic party gave the President the margin of support necessary to enact the administration's program."

Admitting that political sparks will fly in the new Congress on taxes, farm policy, public power and Taft-Hartley, he sees little likeihood that these controversies will endanger the unity needed on national defense, foreign policy and reciprocal trade.

"What the next Congress does about reciprocal trade will affect the price people have to pay for the food on their tables," he stressed, pointing out that our staggering and costly farm surpluses are more closely related to foreign trade than most consumers realize.

* * *

"If we American people, particularly businessmen, would realize that today the world is actually one in the meaning of trade, our country would get behind the President's foreign trade policy and enable him to liberalize tariffs," Bullis said. "Actually, his program stands a better chance now because the Democrats will control the new Congress."



HARRY A BULLIS: Reciprocal trade is part of the pantry.

The Republican-controlled 83rd Congress was niggardly in this respect, he added, pointing out that the chemical interests, some electrical equipment and appliance manufacturers and the high grade watch industry fought against a liberal foreign trade policy. The automobile and steel industries, on the other hand, were in favor of it.

"Economic isolation, as preached by many corporations and old-time conservatives in Washington, overlooks the basic causes of World War I and the last war," said Bullis. "If nations find an economic mall being built around them, they eventually try to fight their way out."

* * *

He believes we have to keep our eyes wide open about Japan. Before the war her natural trade was with the Chinese mainland and Southeast Asia. Now she is forced to look to us and the free world for raw materials and a place to sell her manufactured goods.

"Unless we set up our trade with her, and quickly, as the President is hoping to do, the Japanese economic and political situation could explode," he continued.

"In fact, in the interests of our own economy and our need to keep Japan in our political orbit, I would go so far as to permit Japan to trade with Red China."

He believes this would take a big burden off the American taxpayer and also be another step nearer lasting peace.

Labels Commerce Dept. Project As Censorship

WASHINGTON (AP)—An official of the American Society of Newspaper Editors classifies as "offensive censorship" a new Commerce Department project to limit the overseas flow of strategic information.

J. Russell Wiggins said yesterday he was convinced the project constitutes "the most serious threat to freedom of information that has developed in the Eisenhower administration." Wiggins, vice president and managing editor of the Washington Post and Times Herald, is chairman of the society's Freedom of Information Committee.

His target in letters to the society's president and board of directors was an "office of strategic information" created last month by Secretary of Commerce Weeks.

The office was set up to devise voluntary industry procedures to block leakage of information through trade and technical publications to foreign countries which might use the data "in a manner harmful to the defense interests of the United States."

Wiggins contended the program would hamper U.S. industrial progress and said: "No one has cited any evidence that would warrant government intervention in a fiscal of nonclassified information where its presence hitherto has not been tolerated even in time of war."

Grid's Big 3 Finish Untied, Unbeaten

By BOB HOOBING
The Associated Press

Ohio State, UCLA and Oklahoma —comparative newcomers to college football's elite—finished the 1954 season unbeaten and untied to climax unusual stores in their gridiron histories.

Ohio State won its second national championship and a Rose Bowl invitation by beating Michigan 21-7 in its final game. That's exactly the same score by which the Buckeyes defeated the Wolverines in 1942 for their first mythical title.

UCLA, boasting probably the best team ever at Westwood, can't go to the Rose Bowl to erase defeats of its three previous top representatives. The Pacific Coast Conference rules don't permit successive year appearances at Pasadena.

The only other Bruin club with a regular season undefeated, untied record took a 45-14 shellacking from Illinois, Jan. 1, 1947 in the first year of the Big Ten-PCC Rose Bowl Pact. Michigan State defeated UCLA 28-20 last New Year's Day while Georgia blanked the Bruins 9-0 in 1942.

A similar Big Seven ruling keeps Oklahoma from the Orange Bowl where last year's once-beaten Sooners downed national champion with a 10-0 record in 1950 before being upset 13-7 by Kentucky in the Sugar Bowl.

Oklahoma now has gone 19 games without defeat and hasn't lost in its conference since Kansas beat the Sooners 16-13 in 1946—a 47-game streak.

The present Ohio State team, slated to meet Southern California in the Rose Bowl, is the third unbeaten, untied team in the school's history, following the 1916 and 1944 squads.

The Buckeyes were late entries on the national scene, joining the Big Ten in 1912. The conference began football in 1896. The Bucks got the first of their eight Big Ten titles in 1916.

But the amazing story at Columbus is the parallel between this team and the 1942 national champions who lost one game, 17-7, to Wisconsin.

In both years Ohio State went into the traditional finale against Michigan with sectional and national honors hanging in the balance.

This season State held Michigan a foot from its goal and marched 99 yards plus for the winning score which came on an eight yard pass from Dave Leggett to Dick Brubacker. Howard (Hopalong) Cassady, the Bucks' breakaway ace, romped 53 yards on that drive and later intercepted a pass to start OSU on its way to the insurance score.

Back in '42 the Buckeyes checked the Wolverines on their three before Paul Sarringhaus connected on a 58-yard scoring pass with Les Horvath for their deciding TD. Tackle Chuck Csuri blocked a Tommy Kuzma punt in a defensive maneuver which set up another score.

Gene Fekete, starting fullback for Ohio State in '42, is an assistant coach there this year. And star end Dean Dugger is the younger brother of Jack Dugger, a standout wingman on both the 1942 and 1944 Buckeye clubs.

UCLA fans were hoping for the first national championship for the Bruins keyed by a magnificent line including tackle Jack Ellena and guard Jim Salsbury. But the Bruins placed second to Ohio State. Incidentally Jack Heydenfelt, who played a major role in the Bruins' strategic game, was the finest punting-end on the Pacific slopes since Ralph Heywood booted 'em for Southern Cal in 1943.

To complete the current campaign, UCLA bounced Rose Bowl-bound USC 34-0. The only Bruin loss last year prior to Michigan State was 21-20 to Stanford. UCLA walloped Stanford 72-0 this year but did have a 21-20 squeeker with Washington.

Salsbury recovered a fumble to start the first touchdown and fullback Bob Davenport used a single wing power play to score the second on the team's crucial 12-7 victory over Maryland Oct. 1.

UCLA is really a late-comer to collegiate football. The Bruins started in 1919 and didn't have a winning season until 1925. The first impressive team stepped forward in 1939 led by halfback Kenny Washington. UCLA was unbeaten but tied four times and USC went to the Rose Bowl.

In 1942, Bob Waterfield and teammates survived three defeats to win the coast title but were no match for Georgia in the first trip to Pasadena.

The 1946 outfit challenged Army to a postseason game but found out it had more than it could handle in Illinois. UCLA's one bright spot was reserve halfback Al Hoish's historic 103-yard kickoff return for a touchdown.

The Bruins came up with their first All America in 1946 in end Burr Baldwin and since have added linebacker Donn Moomaw in 1952 and tailback Paul Cameron last year.

Since 1900, Oklahoma has had eight unbeaten seasons but failed to gain widespread recognition until 1938 when it lost to Tennessee, 17-0, in the Orange Bowl. The Sooners won 10 regular season games next in 1949 topped off with 35-0 victory over Louisiana State in the Sugar Bowl.

The Sooners have lost only four games since the 1950 Kentucky defeat—to Texas and Texas A&M in 1951 and to Notre Dame in 1952 and 1953.

Seven All Americas have been named from Oklahoma, six in the last six years. End Waddy Young got the call in 1938. He was followed by guard Paul Burris in 1948, Tackle Wade Walker in 1949, tackle Jim Weatherall in 1950-51, and Frank Anderson in 1950, halfback Billy Vessels in 1952 and guard J. D. Roberts last fall.

Present Arkansas Razorbacks' Coach With New Auto

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark., Dec. 4 (AP)—Football fans today offered concrete evidence of their admiration for the man who, in just two years, raised the Arkansas Razorbacks to a place among the nation's major gridiron powers.

A 1955 model automobile (Cadillac), is to be presented to Coach Bowden Wyatt here Monday. It was paid for from a fund of $20,300 donated by Arkansas fans as a gesture of admiration for Wyatt.

The remainder of the money will be distributed to all employes of the university's athletic department, down to the stadium grounds keeper.

Fans contributed the money during a whirlwind campaign that exceeded all expectations of its sponsors, mostly prominent Razorback boosters. Donations to the fund were limited to a top of $25.

"The people of Arkansas are as deserving of a fine football team as any group in the nation—and I am just thankful that we were able to give them that," commented Wyatt.

Arkansas ran up a winning streak of seven straight this season, and finished with an 8-2 won-lost record, the Southwest Conference championship, a berth in the Cotton Bowl, and a No. 10 national ranking.

The triumphant season represented a personal victory for Wyatt, who took over when Arkansas had fallen just about as far as a major gridiron competitor could fall.

In his first year, Wyatt transformed a split "T" team into a single-wing unit. With the help of two of Arkansas all-time greats, tailback Lamar McHan and end Floyd Sagely, the Razorbacks managed to salvage three victories from their 10-game schedule.

This season found Wyatt still in the process of rebuilding. His team was staffed by enexperienced sophomores at key positions, and he could call on the services of no more than 25 competent players. No one, including Wyatt, expected any better year than the 1953 season.

About 50 Teams Will Compete In Missouri Valley AAU Tourney

WICHITA, Dec. 4 (AP)—Some 50 college and independent teams will compete in the Missouri Valley AAU men's basketball tournament at Wichita, Feb. 26-March 5, sponsors said today.

The tourney assignment was by Les Warren of Kansas City, chairman of the MVAAU basketball committee. Play will be in the Wichita Forum, where the McPherson American Legion won the 1954 title.

Teams from Missouri and Kansas are eligible for the meet, in Wichita for the ninth consecutive year.

Tourney officials listed by Warren included Harry Peebles, general chairman; Ty Lockett, sedgwick County sheriff, tournament secretary; Frank Wolf, Missouri valley and Big Seven sports official, meet director.

Spasticville, Wichita training school for the cerebro-palsied, again will share in the meet's proceeds, Warren said.

Sports Scraps

(By D. Kelly Scruton)

MISSOURI University football fans have been wondering WHAT HAPPENED? in Baltimore Thanksgiving Day—remember that 74-13 trouncing which was administered the Tigers by Maryland. The answer was given by Don Faurot last week at the 33rd Degree Fan Club annual banquet held at the Tiger Hotel in Columbia.

Bob Broeg, sportswriter for the St. Louis Post Dispatch, was the principal speaker at that dinner. From the way Broeg started out it sounded if he was giving the boys another good trouncing—he was — but in a different manner, and such a way that football player or fan could not take offense. It was constructive and I didn't hear a mumble from a Tigerman.

Broeg reviewed the fact that there was satisfaction in the 1954 season if the Tigers won but one game. That was the 1954 Tigers evened things up with Kansas Jayhawks. Faurot's gridiron men in recent years have wiped out a 10 game deficit, the speaker explained and that is wonderful.

In all respects to our friend Broeg, an alumnus of the University '40, the best of all was a brief to the point explanation of the Maryland game.

Coach Don Faurot did not offer an alibi. He told the true facts which are understandable. He said at one point in part "I never made the mistake I did this year and it was the mistake of my life.. That is scheduling a tough game after we have played Kansas and Oklahoma."

Faurot didn't go to great lengths in explaining it. In so many words he indicated it is hard to get a warm boiler heated up after the steam has gone. By this I would say that the boys were at their peak when they were meeting Oklahoma and especially Kansas. After the latter game there is a terrific let up.

As I personally see it now, what was there to gain in beating Maryland, what did a loss mean, well no team likes to lose, but there was nothing at stake. For Maryland there was chances of a bowl bid in a defeat over Missouri, the bigger the better the prospects.

For Missouri there was no prospect of a bowl bid, nothing at stake in the conference, so there was little to build up a fire to heat up the boilers. The fuel just wasn't there. Consequently no fire, no heat, no steam.

But look out next year if any big time team gets scheduled ahead of the Oklahoma game and especially the Kansas game. The Tigers, I am sure, will display some steam.

—O—

DURING the banquet Broeg read an article by Bob Burns, sports editor of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, calling attention to a proposal of Bill Corum, nationally known sports writers and president of the Kentucky Derby, who plans to put up a beautiful trophy for the winner of a game between Missouri and Fordham if and when they play again.

Corum wants to name the trophy after two World War II veterans who lost their lives in the service. He wants it to carry the name of Alex Santilli of Fordham and a veteran Tiger from the University of Missouri. He wants the Tigers to choose their man to be honored.

It has been pointed out that Bob Brenton and Jeff Davis who lost their lives in the service played on that 1941 football team which met Fordham in the Sugar Bowl game. Davis was a second string center, but played first string in '42.

Bob Faurot, brother of Coach Faurot, and Jerry Notowitz played on teams at the University prior to 1941. Both these Tigermen lost their lives in action during the War.

Corum, an M. U. alumnus, was at that Sugar Bowl game and was impressed with Santilli as a player and again when they visited together after the game. He has kinda adopted Fordham as one of his favored schools along with Missouri.

ACC To Meet, Consider Proposed New Football Pact With Orange Bowl

GREENSBORO, N. C., Dec. 4 (AP)—The Atlantic Coast Conference meets here next Friday to consider a proposed new three-year football contract with the Orange Bowl at Miami.

The original two-year pact with the Orange Bowl, matching teams of the ACC and Big Seven conferences, ends with the coming Jan. 1 meeting between Duke and Nebraska.

While officials of the two conferences have not divulged terms of the proposed new three-year deal, it is believed to involve a bigger share of Orange Bowl revenue, particularly television and radio receipts.

Another item on the conference's agenda is the setting up of a conference officials booking office. The assignment of officials for all conference athletic contests presently is handled by the Southern Conference booking office.

Name Ralph Houk To Manage Denver In American Assn.

DENVER, Dec. 4 (AP) — Ralph Houk, a reserve catcher and later a coach for the New York Yankees was named manager today of the Denver club in the American Association.

Denver general manager Bob Howsam said Houk, who is 34, will be playing manager for the Bears. Denver, champion of the Class A Western League last season, was drafted into the Triple-A association last Monday.

The franchise was moved west after the Philadelphia Athletics of the American League were transferred to Kansas City. Denver will take over Kansas City's role as the Yankees' top farm club.

Lee MacPhail, director of the Yankees' farm system, described Houk as "aggressive, with worlds of hustle and drive." Although he has been in professional baseball since 1939, this is Houk's first managerial post.

Andy Cohen, onetime New York Giants second baseman, managed Denver's Western League club the last four seasons and has been named pilot of the New Orleans Pelicans of the Southern Association for 1955.

Houk, who bats and throws right handed, began his baseball career in 1939 at Neosho, Mo., in the Arkansas-Missouri league. During World War II he served four years with the paratroops and attained the rank of major.

He played for Beaumont in the Texas League in 1946 and batted .294 in 87 games. He joined the Yankees in 1947 and caught for the Kansas City Blues in 1948, batting .275 in 95 games.

Irish Smother SMU 26-14 In Cotton Bowl

DALLAS, Dec. 4 (AP) — Notre Dame's powerful line smothered Southern Methodist's ground game today as slick Ralph Guglielmi and Joe Heap led the Fighting Irish to a 26-14 victory before a roaring crowd of 75,504 at the Cotton Bowl.

Guglielmi's alert quarterbacking and the power bursts of Heap and Don Schaefer behind a bruising line helped Terry Brenna, 26-year-old freshman coach, end his season with a 9-1 record.

Heap scored from the four in the first period after Guglielmi's passes set it up and sped 89 yards on a brilliant toe-dancing run down the sidelines in the third period of the nationally televised contest.

Guglielmi, closing his Notre Dame career with six other Notre Dame starters including Heap and Schaefer, sneaked over from the three in the second period and sophomore end Bod Scannell dashed 19 yards for a touchdown after blocking John Roach's punt just before the half ended.

SMU gave the Irish a rugged battle in the first period, leading 7-6 on Roach's quarterback sneak from the 10 and Ed Bernet's conversion. Schaefer had missed the placement after Notre Dame's early score. Schaefer later added two extra points.

John Marshall's fine 76-yard touchdown run in the last period was the best ground move by SMU that had averaged over 200 yards a gome all season. Bernet converted for the second time.

Notre Dame's second and third teams played much of the last period.

Notre Dame	6	13	7	0	—26
S. Methodist	7	0	0	7	—14

Southern Methodist scoring: Roach, Marshall. Conversions Bernet 2.

Houston Dumps Detroit 19-7 For 2nd Place In MVA

HOUSTON, Dec. 4 (AP) — After fumbling the ball 14 times the first three periods, Houston and Detroit crammed three touchdowns in the last five minutes today as Houston took a 19-7 victory to grab second place in final Missouri Valley Conference standings.

A crowd of fewer than 8,000 sat in the 70,000-seat Rice Stadium to see fumbles and four interceptions stop practically everything until the thrill-packed final minutes.

Before the final uprising, Houston had crossed the Detroit 41 only on a 77-yard scoring drive in the second quarter, halfback Don Horgrove skirted left end from the 10 for the score.

With 4 minutes in the final period, quarterback Jimmy Dickey made it 13-0 by passing 9 yards to halfback Jim Baughman. Detroit came right back and scored in two passing plays, quarterback Jim Lobkovich hitting end Bob Chendes for the final 20.

On the first play after the kickoff, Dickey ran 58 yards for the final Houston score. Only six seconds remained.

Verle Cray kicked the first extra point for Houston but Donald Bloom and George Finn missed their attempts. Joe Beluso converted for Detroit.

and approve a completely new set of traffic regulations, and at the same instant, repeal many or all of our present traffic laws. Following enactment of these new laws, rigid traffic enforcement is to be effective. This is a very commendable, much-needed and long overdue enterprise. There are, however, two sides to all questions, and this venture must be tempered with reason and common sense if it is to meet with the whole-hearted approval and cooperation of the people, both the residents of Sedalia and our friends and customers who reside in the rural areas surrounding Sedalia.

"Our merchants and business houses cannot afford to have their rural customers driven to Marshall, Warrensburg, Windsor and other near towns simply because they must move their cars every hour or so and feel assured of at least one parking ticket each time they go shopping in Sedalia. This, I believe, is happening. On what scale, I can't say, but I have talked to a number of people from Smithton, Green Ridge, Hughesville, etc., and their first question is usually, 'What's Sedalia trying to do, run us out?' And most of these conversations have concluded with their statement they were going elsewhere to do their future shopping. Neither can these merchants afford to have SAFB customers driven from Sedalia. In the last two days, I have heard, without verification, that eight Air Base families are moving ing to Knob Noster, Warrensburg and Windsor for various reasons, one being they had no garage in which to keep their cars, but did have shiny new parking meters in front of their residences.

"Another phase of this new traffic code which is particularly objectionable, partly because it affects my business, is that most firms, with trucks and heavy merchandise to handle, are being deprived of loading zones, zones which were granted by a previous city council, and which they have had for years. Many of these firms pay real estate tax to the city, many of them pay an advalorem tax based on the size of their inventory of merchandise, many of them pay a tax on their volume of business, most of them pay a personal tax on their equipment, all of them pay a city license fee, and any who have trucks pay personal tax on the assessed valuation of the truck, pay for a city truck license, and pay a gasoline tax on each gallon of fuel used in that truck. These truck licenses and taxes should entitle these firms to some privilege, as they are not paid by firms whose merchandise is carried out by the customer. No firm buys a truck unless it is needed, and if it is needed, it stands to reason they must have a place to load and unload the truck. Would we put parking meters in the driveway of a service station, an auto dealer or other garage? Of course not, they need these drives to get their merchandise and business in and out of the building. Well, it is just as essential for the furniture and appliance dealer, the auto parts dealer, the awning and mattress dealer, or any other dealer handling heavy merchandise, to have a place to load and unload merchandise and get business in and out of his building, and it would be ridiculous to state otherwise. These firms now are given two alternatives, they will park to load and unload their trucks at the curbs, or double-park where they will be subject to constant arrest and fine or they will go out of business. Needless to say, any who goes out of business will no longer pay countless taxes and licenses.

"I have been informed that at least some members of the Citizen's Traffic Advisory Committee, recommended loading zones for the various firms needing them, but were overruled by the traffic engineer employed by the city at a cost of several thousand dollars. Incidentally, it would seem members of the above named committee are due a vote of thanks. They are a group of loyal, civic-minded people who gave many hours of their own time, making surveys, taking pictures, studying and trying to unsnarl our traffic problems, and they did it for free.

"This is my second letter in three or four months. In the first I presented arguments against the proposed street paving program, and the method of approach. I may now be labeled by some as a chronic complainer, but I am not. I approve the greater part of the traffic revision, if some of the unfair provisions are ironed out, if we are not arrogant in the enforcement, and, if the enforcement, is carried out justly and equally for all, particularly in the matter of overtime and double-parking.

"In my first letter, I said, and I still maintain, it is not justice to force people without cars to pay for street paving, simply because they are property owners. The point has been made that it would not be fair for a resident of, for instance, Barrett Avenue to pay for the paving of Fifth Street. Would it be any more unfair than for a property owner without any children to pay school taxes? It is quite possible the Barrett Avenue resident may drive over Fifth Street four or five times daily, while the Fifth Street resident may not even have a car. Besides, many people do not have the money to pay for street paving. Granted, some of our streets need attention. In comparison, some of the houses need painting. Mine, at least won't get it until I have the money to pay for it.

"Perhaps I'm old-fashioned, but I still believe there's two sides to every question, that every individual is entitled to a fair shake, and in spending money only about twice as fast as it comes in."

The Rev. Edward R. Sims, rector of Calvary Episcopal church has directed a letter to Mayor Julian Bagby in which he pleads consideration of the church's problem:

"The Honorable Julian H. Bagby, City Hall, Sedalia, Missouri

"Dear Mr. Mayor:

"I am writing with reference to the proposed new traffic ordinance, particularly those aspects of it which touch our neighborhood. It is proposed, as I understand it, to prohibit parking a any time along the following curbings: Ohio Street, from the alley between Seventh and Broadway south across Broadway to Ninth, both sides of the street; Broadway, from Osage east across Ohio to Lamine, both sides of the street.

"This virtually surrounds Calvary Church with a prohibited parking area. We are perfectly willing to accept expert advice in such matters as these, and are anxious to see our city progress in traffic control; however, it is my considered opinion that enforcement of these restrictions seven days a week works an undue and unnecessary hardship on our parish. My protest of this arrangement before a meeting of the Citizens' Advisory Committee met with no success.

"I now turn to the City Council, and address to that body these two questions:

"1. Why should parking restrictions designed to assist the flow of traffic at peak traffic periods and on peak traffic days be imposed on Sunday traffic when these restrictions work an obvious hardship?

"2. Why should the traffic flowing past our churches on Sunday receive favored treatment as against the traffic going to our churches?

"Neither of these questions has been answered to my satisfaction; I hope I shall have the opportunity to raise them Monday night.

"Respectfully yours, Edward R. Sims"

They Maintain Treasure Chest For Children at the Hospital

The Girl Scout troops of Sedalia maintain a Treasure Chest at the Bothwell Hospital. The purpose of the chest is to furnish the children in the hospital with toys and books. The following troops have recently donated to the Treasure Chest: Troop 57, Mark Twain School, leaders, Mrs. H. N. Lambirth and Mrs. Philip McLaughlin; Troop 36, Sacred Heart School, Mrs. William Dick, leader; Troop 8, Mark Twain School, Mrs. Charles Merrill and Mrs. G. A. Ragland, leaders; and Troop 25, Horace Mann School, Mrs. S. M. Knapp, leader.

Mrs. Cecil Owen's home at 823 West Sixth Street gave the impression of a glittering gift shop Nov. 30 and Dec. 1 when the Girl Scout leaders met for the arts and crafts work shop. Samples of gifts that can be made by children were exhibited throughout the home. It was estimated that 50 women attended one of the five sessions. A special session was held in the evening for the leaders who work.

Miss Cecile Harrison gave a talk on the morning of Nov. 30 on the history of Christmas carols. In the afternoon Mrs. Karl Schofer gave a short talk on some Christmas customs in Germany. She also displayed and explained the purpose of an Advent wreath.

The Girl Scout Leaders' Club will meet Dec. 7 from 10 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. at the Hubbard School. The hostesses will be Mrs. Olander Black, Mrs. Idella McDonnell, Mrs. Herbert, president, Mrs. Alberta Carter, Mrs. Evelyn Cox and Mrs. Thelma Jones. All leaders planning to attend are asked to bring covered dishes and their own services. The leaders are also requested to bring a toy (25 cents or less) for the hospital treasure chest.

Troop 25, Horace Mann School, Mrs. Knapp, leader, has been working on their needle craft badge. They made samplers for their homes. The troop marched in the Veterans Day and the Christmas parades. They made tray favors for the hospital, held a Troop Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 23 and voted to give some little girl invalid a gold fish bowl and fish.

Firemen Collect More Than $450 For Dystrophy

More than $405 was collected in the recent Sedalia Fire Fighters March for Muscular Dystrophy, it was announced today by Frank Sloan, drive chairman of Local No. 823, International Association of Fire Fighters, AFL.

"In the name of Sedalia Fire Fighters, I want to thank all who helped in the great crusade for funds to conquer this dread killer of children, muscular dystrophy," Sloan said today. "The success of Sedalia's March could not have been achieved without the splendid cooperation of organizations and individuals who so willingly give time and money to aid our effort."

The announced total of contributions is an incomplete figure, Sloan pointed out. Many contributions were mailed and are still being sent directly to the national office of Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America, Inc., in the contribution envelopes.

Pettis Farmers May Sign Now For ACP Plan

All Pettis County farmers are advised that they may now sign up for the 1955 ACP program in the local ASC office, 209½ South Ohio. Deadline date for signing up is Dec. 10. After that time, applications will still be accepted but will be considered as "late filed" requests. These requests will be approved as funds become available.

Initial establishment of a stand of trees or multiflora rose shrubs in windbreaks or shelter belts on farmland for erosion control, watershed protection or forestry purpose; agricultural limestone, by the sail test; establishment of a vegetative cover to protect cropland throughout the 1955 crop year; initial establishment of cropland of perennial or biennial legumes or perennial grasses, or mixtures of grasses and legumes to retard erosion and to improve sail structure permeability, or waterholding capacity as part of a crop rotation; and application of rock phosphate materials to permit the use of grasses and legumes for soil improvement and protection.

Houstonia Parson Leaves Town Suddenly

The Rev. Bill Howes, pastor of the Community Church in Houstonia, has disappeared from that community and has not been heard from since Monday, Nov. 22. He had been gone several days before any investigation was made, according to a member of the church board.

Members of the board, it was reported, went to the church parsonage and, after getting in, found a note on the minister's desk which indicated he would let the board know within a few days why he was leaving.

A check by the church board with relatives resulted in information that he was in San Diego, Calif., on Thanksgiving Day.

There was nothing wrong, according to the member of the board. The board member could not advance any information as to why Rev. Howes, his wife and two children had departed.

Sedalia Garden Clubs Offer Ideas for Floral Arrangements at Christmas Time

Exhibit Is Held at Sedalia Public Library, Second Floor, on Saturday and Sunday Without Cost to the Public;

(Staff Photos)

MADONNA—The Madonna arrangement at left was designed by Club No. 6. It is one of several such figurine arrangements that may be seen at the Christmas decoration show at the Public Library.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND WELCOME IN—That's what this Santa Claus front door decoration by Club No. 7 might be saying to guests at your home if you use this type of arrangement. Others are included in the show.

Show Also Includes Idea for Gift Wrapping

The Christmas Decoration Show which opened Saturday at the Sedalia Public Library will be held this afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Members of the nine Sedalia Garden Clubs sponsoring the show have been working hard to create arrangements that will give people ideas for Christmas decorations in their own homes. It is a civic service offered by the Garden Clubs to residents of Sedalia and all the surrounding towns. This year the show is early so those seeing it may have time to plan their own decorations from the designs offered.

Gay Christmas corsages filled another table and ideas to brighten up the trays for sick or shut-ins.

It is not only time to decorate it is gift wrapping time, too, and the Garden Club women didn't forget that either. Boxes of all shapes and sizes give that magic of Christmas, the gift giving season. Always people will say, "That is so pretty I hate to unwrap it," but these will be gift wrapping that need not be unwrapped—there is nothing in the boxes, but they are beautiful. Among them those wrapping Christmas gifts that will be unwrapped may find ideas for packages that will be lovely under the Christmas trees.

Then there are the ideas for all kinds of Christmas decorations that children can make themselves. There is a table filled with clever arrangements that have been made by children, members of the Junior Garden Club.

Not only are there Christmas decorations, but also there are beautifully decorated Christmas trees in which originality has been used.

It has been a lot of work, this show, but now that everything is in place the Garden Club members think it is worth all their efforts because everyone seems to be enjoying the beauty and novelties of the decorations. They hope they have helped to get people in the spirit for Christmas and that all the homes will have a holiday atmosphere for the merry activities of the season.

French-Fried Flying Saucers Even Have Hot Lips

By Rosette Hargrove
NEA Staff Correspondent

PARIS — Flying saucers and cigars piloted by Martians are showing a definite predilection for "la belle France."

Within the last few months Frenchmen all over the country have lived in the hope of seeing and meeting either or both. People quiver with delicious apprehension at the thought suddenly they may find themselves face to face with one of these strange beings from another planet, whether Mars, Venus or Uranus.

"Collective hallucination" is the conclusion which serious-minded Frenchmen have arrived at. It has the merit of casting no aspersions on the good faith of their compatriots.

The post-war popularity of science fiction, the technicolor movie "The War of the Planets" released in France early this year, plus optical illusions, can well be responsible for all these incidents, say the scientists. They point out that the "apparitions" have occurred mainly in those provinces where the film has been shown.

But apparently there is yet another problem. "Why is it," asks Samedi-Soir, "that the first flying saucers were initially seen in the USA then the epidemic invaded Europe, and particularly France? Why is it that in the USA a Martian has never set foot on the ground and that several have been reported outside their space ships in this country?"

Fifty-eight year old Antoine Mazaud, who farms in the Correze, some 350 miles south of Paris, is the first and, so far, only Frenchman who boasts of having been bussed by a Martian. His experience, which happened early in September, is the following:

Returning home at nightfall after a hard day in the fields, Antoine took his usual short cut when suddenly a few feet ahead he sighted a strange figure.

A tough guy over six feet tall, Mazaud had never been afraid of anything, yet suddenly he was stricken with untold terror. Some instinct warned him that the being was more than strange. He could not distinguish his features because he wore a helmet with a kind o visor such as motor cyclitsts wear.

About five feet high, the figure swayed slightly from side to side. Mazaud gripped his pitchfork tightly, ready to defend himself. But the figure advanced a few steps, silently seized the farmer's hand in a tight clasp, then kissed him. Before he had time to recover his senses, the Martian was already walking away.

Mazaud shook himself and then made for his farm as fast as his legs could carry him. But he had barely gone ten yards when he saw the "thing." There it was, some 30 feet ahead ,an elongated, glittering machine, about 15 feet long. It took off with a faint, rustling noise, slowly gaining altitude.

Mazaud recounted his terrifying experience to his wife and son. Soon the whole village heard about it. The authorities sent investigators. But no trace of the Martian or his machine could be found. But to the whole countryside, the mysterious apparition could only be one of those mysterious inter-planetary visitors.

About the same time, 35-year-old Marius Dewilde, steel worker in Northern France, was quietly reading a magazine in his kitchen. It was 10:45 p. m. Suddenly his dog Kiki started barking vehemently, as though strangers were trying to penetrate the front yard.

Seizing his flashlight, Marius went outside to investigate. Beyond the paling which separated his garden from the railroad track, he saw something which looked like an abandoned peasant's cart. Thought Marius: "I must warn the stationmaster."

But Kiki was still barking and when Marius turned his light he saw two figures about three feet tall. Marius declared they wore a diver's suit and that their helmets gave out an unearthly metallic reflection. Running towards the strangers, Marius then saw a square window open silently and a green ray beamed at him. This paralyzed him momentarily.

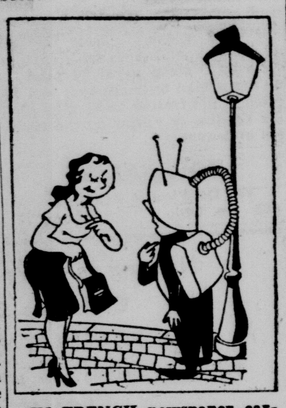
When he recovered the use of his legs and made for the machine, it rose gently from the ground with a soft whistling noise and belching thick black smoke. Bell-shaped it swayed gently as it gained altitude, took on a bright orange-red color and disappeared westward.

The only signs which investigators could find were a few scratches on the rails. They concluded that "only a machine landing on crutches could have made them."

French meteorologists admit that at least two of their implements might be responsible for the delusions of the uninitiated—test balloons and "nephoscopic" searchlights, which project moving and often unaccountable spots on clouds.

Then there are such things as comets, shooting stars, meteorites, halos, planets, the reflection of powerful automobile headlights on clouds—and finally, electrostatic phenomena in ionized atmosphere, invisible to the naked eye but detectable on radar screens.

Despite these explanations, the mystery of flying saucers and the other space ships remains as much a mystery to France as it was to America.



IN FRENCH newspaper cartoon, man from Mars meets girl on Paris street. Says she: "Me? I'm from Venus."

Red China Says It Will 'Free' Formosa Despite Security Pact

TOKYO (AP)—Red China said today it will "liberate" Formosa despite the mutual security treaty signed this week by the United States and Nationalist China, Peiping Radio reported.

"The Chinese people will never tolerate this," the broadcast said. It quoted the People's Daily, official organ of the Chinese Communist party.

The newspaper called the treaty "a naked war provocation against the Chinese people" and repeated the Red government's oft-voiced threat that "the Chinese people will liberate Taiwan (Formosa)."

The article also attacked Britain's appeal to the Red Chinese not to launch any "precipitate action" against Formosa.

The British statement "can only be interpreted as a support for the U.S.-Chiang Kai-shek treaty and an encouragement to American aggressive activities," the article said.

Your Wardrobe
by Frances Sagaloff at Sage's

Selecting lingerie for mi-lady's gifts this Christmas will be great fun. Red nylon lingerie is more important than ever. Panties, slips, gowns, petticoats and robes are all available. Champagne is new and luxurious too. You'll find new improvements in slips—sheer net at the bottom is gathered fuller or pleated so it will not appear too short. Sheer tops lined so they can be worn under sheer blouses. Nyron lingerie is beautiful, and less expensive than nylon. A new shade that will be very important is Sand—be sure to see it, as you'll want some of it for yourself. Beautiful lace trimmed nylon panties are wonderful to give too. Luxurious petticoats are always nice to receive and the younger set certainly will welcome another bouffant petticoat. A box of rayon panties with the days of the week make a wonderful inexpensive gift as well as a box of six pairs in a pastel jewel box. Be sure you know the correct sizes when selecting lingerie. It will eliminate exchanges later.

Make the Most Of Wide Bulb Selection

By HENRY PREE
Written for NEA Service

Heavy rain in many areas across the nation has not been conducive to much out-door garden work. And a visit to garden supply shops is rather disturbing because of the countless tulip, narcissus, daffodil, hyacinth and other spring-blooming bulbs begging to be planted.

Fortunately there is still time to take advantage of the wide selection of top-grade Dutch bulbs —and get them in the ground. Digging a foot deep to test the soil showed it to be in workable condition.

Tulips, hyacinths and daffodils are the commonest of the Dutch bulbs but there are many kinds of lesser-known ones that deserve a place in the garden. The botanical specie tulips, eranthis, chionodora, grape hyacinth, lilies and the many forms of narcissus are a few that come to mind.

All gardens, large or small, can benefit by a wider selection among the early small bulbs that will grow under shrubs, about trees in the lawn and the perennials.

The best species of the botanical tulips are the Kaufmannianas, also called the waterlily tulips. They are the first tulips to bloom. Two other varieties which should not be omitted from the border plantings are the fosterianas, red emperor and princeps.

These two tulips, which are about the largest of all, should be included because of their vivid red color. Both should be used because the princeps is ten days later in blooming. In picking tulips of any species, select the newer varieties, because generally they give you larger flowers on longer stems.

Among the newer and better Darwin tulips are aristocrat—color a brilliant pink, slightly lighter at the edges; orchid, undoubtedly the largest of all long-stemmed tulips, the color of true lilacs; and Annie Speelman, a pure white of tremendous size. Last spring we fell in love with two lily-flowered varieties, white triumphator and golden duchess, a beautiful golden yellow.

The trumpet narcissus are by far the most popular, the most faithful, and make the most show with their large yellow and white flowers.

The most popular varieties are Beersheba, a lovely white; unsurpassable, an extremely large yellow flower that is much more satisfactory than King Alfred. The large and small cup varieties offer an interesting study of color and shape.

These are available with cups in shades of red, orange, yellow and white. Though not as tall, they can be successfully blended with the large trumpet daffodils. Daffodils, an early herald of spring, are a true blessing to many gardeners because they do not have to be lifted and stored every year.

Mixed among your low hardy plants both in shade and sun, the triandrus, cyclamineus, jonquilla, tazetta, species and wild forms are adapted easily to the surrounding picture.

Dutch bulbs are the best flowers to bring early spring beauty, and a little work at this time of year brings large rewards. They require a minimum of care and there is no competition from weeds, as the flowers have faded before any of the useless plants arrive.

Food news: you can buy frozen shrimp that have been graded, peeled, deveined and put into eight-ounce packages. Handy to have on hand to use for shrimp cocktail as a first course. Or heat the shrimp with a can of stewed tomatoes and serve over rice as a main course.

Those do-it-yourself fans often get paint or varnish on their work clothes. While the stains are still fresh, soften them with turpentine, lard or oil, then wash in warm soapy water.

Want to conceal a scratch on a piece of furniture? Lightly draw a wax stick, made especially for furniture in woodtones, over the scratch; then dub the wax in well with your finger. Now wipe with a soft dry cloth.

Cotton Mills Still Control Textile Industry in America

By Henry Lesesne
NEA Special Correspondent

COLUMBIA, S. C—Despite the continuing upsurge of such "wonder" fibers as rayon, acrylics and the rest of their test-tube sisters, a look at the South's new 1954-55 model cotton mills shows that cotton is still the old pro of the textile industry.

And it's no contest. Today's figures show America consumes more cotton that it ever did—to the tune of a whopping 80 per cent of the nation's 12.6 billion yards of domestic mill fibre produced annually, exclusive of wool.

This comes as a considerable surprise to garment - conscious Amreca ndia wf'5k
America and its modern assumptions that anything not made of a wood, chemical or seaweed derivative doesn't even rate at unbent closet hanger.

* * *

The surest barometer of any industry — expansion — backs these figures up. In an era when most supposed King Cotton was a shaky guy, five new mills have been built in South Carolina to handle his business. And in Sevierville, Tenn., a multi-million-dollar bale-to-bolt mill is scheduled for completion early next year.

Despite current adjustment to normal peacetime needs and a drastic decline in U.S. export of textile goods, the cotton industry has been clearing the decks for a full-fledged modernization of its business.

An old industry, cotton is moving forward on the strength of another basic thing — the birth rate. Over 12,000 babies are born daily in this nation and the Census Bureau forecasts a population of over 200 million by 1975.

All of which brightens the future for the crop which has been more important to the South than its drawl.

This expansion—outside of complete new plants—is taking place in modernization of what the industry already has. One - story, windowless, air-conditioned plants are sprouting up throughout South Carolina's cotton country.

* * *

This is a surprising trend, because with the exception of some post-war bleacheries and finishing plants in the southeast, cotton plant construction had been at a standstill since the mid-1920's. In that period, mills reached a peak spindleage of about 38 million. It now is at 23 million, but the drop has been brought about by modern production methods, rather than a loss of business.

"With the population increase, there'll always be a demand for quality textiles. And a well-managed mill nearly always makes a profit."

Pajamas Have Style Variety This Winter

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Women who love pajamas for their warmth and unbunchy comfort will have fun this winter. Rather than having only a choice of colors in the same old cuts, PJ fans may have as varied wardrobes as their sister nightgown fans.

Ruffled knickers with a matching shirt give a matador touch to the pajama-wearing woman. Or she may choose an Italian-inspired shirt and pants or a zippered coverall with knitted socks that'll keep her as warm as a baby. A T-shirt top and cardigan can hop out of bed and answer the 'phone with no loss of modesty.

Some of the brightest inventions of this year's fashions have been converted into nightclothes that are a far cry from any old thing.

One old-fashioned quality clings to these styles for log-sawing their washability. The fabrics the manufacturers are using for nightwear practically crawl into the soap-suds by themselves, they're so practical: flannelette, balbriggan, rayon challis, cotton challis, brushed rayon and nylon.

They can all be washed by hand and all but brushed rayon can be washed in short cycles in the machine. The spin dry should be omitted on the flannelette.

For drying, good results come easily with a few directions: balbriggans should be hung to dry; flannelette should be shaken and dried on a hanger, as should rayon and cotton challis; brushed nylon should be squeezed gently and hung wrong side out; brushed nylon should be hung to drip dry on a shaped hanger with a skirt hanger used for the pants.

Sue McNealy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McNealy, 700 East 16th, will be installed as honored queen of Bethel No. 15, Order of Job's Daughters, in a public installation to be held Wednesday evening, at Masonic Temple.

Resort Wear Centers on Cotton

Curves are slightly tamed in these new resort fashions from California. White felt fish are appliqued on black linen Bermuda shorts (left) worn with long torso top, brilliant orange cummerbund and matching jacket. Simple sheath (center) has straight full-length coat lined in fine pima cotton. Dress has low, wide, rounded neck and short sleeves. Rib knit costume (right) has jacket with the loose middy look worn with sheathed skirt. Waistline is easy but definite. Colors are navy blue and white.

NEW YORK —(NEA)— Loose tops, either wide or long (or both) worn over very tight pants, short or long, typify this year's resort playclothes.

Planter's plants are the newest length. These just cover the kneecap, are sometimes called gondolier pants. There are lots of skintight long pants, too, in solid colors of bright prints. Plenty of very short, shorts, too. These are meant to be worn with a long, loose top that very nearly covers them.

Beach coats are cut straight and turn up in unexpected fabrics, like the hound's-tooth check. Playskirts continue in various versions of the Bermuda skirt. Some are permanently pleated cottons that flare and there are knits in white linen.

There are lots of cottons with a hand-woven look. This means a coarse weave most often and interesting striped and checked patterns. Most designers are making use of mat jersey because they like the way it drapes and wraps and feel that it's practical because it packs beautifully.

The bosom line is higher and uplifted and there's a lengthening of the torso. And wherever a skirt widens, it spreads from the hip yoke rather than from the natural waistline.

Splashes of color, from cool to hot, are typical of the California landscape, starting with the blue-green and mauve tints of the sea and running through to the famed California oranges: persimmon, tangerine, and capucine or "hot orange."

The fabric story from California centers around cotton, either homespun and rough-hewn in character or with a silken sheen. Designers have used denim, pique, broadcloth, and percale extensively. But they've made use of pure imported linens, too, either printed or plain and in some instances, combined. Silk looks raw or tweedy and is in first place for late day dresses.

Guest Artist - ANDREW GAINEY

Baritone Star of Opera Radio and Television

Youthful star of concert, opera, television, the Broadway theatre and the major operetta seasons across the country, Andrew Gainey's name is versatility. He can sing you a musical comedy ballad with as much feeling and know-how as he brings to a song by Richard Strauss or an aria by Mozart or Puccini. Mr. Gainey has given recitals throughout the country—he has also toured as soloist in Rodgers and Hammerstein concert programs. He's played major baritone roles in many operas with the New York City Opera Company, New Orleans Opera, Central City Opera House, etc. Shortly before he left New York last June to fulfill a heavy schedule of light opera and musical comedy and "pop" concert engagements, Andrew Gainey created the leading male role of "Top" in Aaron Copland's new opera, "The Tender Land" which had its world premiere at New York's City Center.

Most recently Mr. Gainey's television appearances have included guest performances for CBS's OMNIBUS and—unusual for a singer—engagements as a straight actor on the Kraft Theatre and Studio One. Born in the south, Andrew Gainey moved west to complete his education at the University of Denver, graduating with a B.A. degree. He had made a dent as a radio performer and as a recitalist and oratorio singer when the war interrupted his career. After an honorable discharge from the Air Corps, Gainey picked up his career—impressively—as a summer replacement for James Melton in "Harvest of Stars," and since that time his rise has been rapid.

They're Growing Charm on the Farm Today

By ALICIA HART
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON —(NEA)— The farm wife of today has a dazzling new look. She still might live out in the sticks, but for dress, appearance and social poise she's on a par with most city gals.

Modern devices in and outside the farm home are giving the farm woman time to devote more attention to herself. This does not mean she has quit helping to feed the chickens or given up rising before the rooster's crow.

But now she does these things and manages to look prettier, too.

"Before my husband was able to buy a combine, I had to feed as many as nine men when our wheat was being cut and stored —now he needs only one helper," says attractive Mrs. Tom Reinertson of Frankfort, Kan. "Also I have a home freezer, gas refrigerator and washing machine. I remember when it seemed like I was continually preparing food."

Mrs. Reinertson is one of 2000 farm wives who recently came to Washington from all over the nation to attend the national convention of the Home Demonstration Council. Through thousands of clubs this organization keeps approximately three million rural women up to date on everything from fashions and home improvement to international problems.

It is sponsored by State Land Grant Colleges, the Department of Agriculture and county governments through the Federal Extension Service.

"I wouldn't swap my place with the lady in town for anything in the world," exclaims charming Mrs. Homer Green, whose husband has a cotton farm in Tutwiler, Miss. "Why, I have all the conveniences of city folks, and I don't have to worry about being hedged in.

"Furthermore, farm women have taken tremendous steps in developing their looks and personality. Until recently very few of us would have dared to appear before a group of men or even women to make a speech. Now we're doing it all the time in community and civic affairs."

Most husbands are reluctant to admit how proud they are of their wives' achievements, say the women. But as one mother of four children puts it, "When George lets me come to Washington for a whole week and leave him with the kids, I know he's pleased with what I'm doing."

Although women do not devote as much actual time to farm chores these days, they keep plenty busy, for the modern farm wife has some new problems.

"Household help just isn't what it used to be," explains Mrs. J. Homer Remsburg, whose husband and son run a dairy farm in Middletown, Md. "A young woman wouldn't think of coming in and doing work around the house. All of them go to town for jobs."

Chic Mrs. Olaf Midtbo of Hutton, N. D., agrees. But she notes that many of these girls wind up marrying farm boys. She points to herself as an example.

"I'm a farm bride, but before that I went to college and then worked in the city. A lot of us who were born out in the country are coming back."

One of the biggest headaches for an economy-minded woman on the farm is irregularity of income.

"You just never can plan from one year to the next," declares Mrs. Clifford Smith of Bangor, Me. "This makes it particularly hard when it comes to getting clothes for growing children, making needed improvements around the house and buying new farm equipment.

"Yet there's one thing we always have no matter how hard things get and that's plenty of food. That means a great deal."

Asks Speed-Up In Mailing Yuletide Cards

In purpose, if not appearance, Postmaster Maurice Hogan recalls the officers on those dramatic World War II recruiting posters that reminded passerby, "Uncle Sam Needs You!"

The battle, in this case, is against time. Christmas cards and gift packages are arriving at Post Office headquarters far too slowly. As a result, immediate cooperation from the public must be enlisted.

"The big danger is that commercial shipments and incoming Christmas mail may slow-up the outgoing operation. Poorly-wrapped packages have also complicated our work a great deal," the postmaster said today.

Cancellation machines now register about 20,000 pieces of mail per day. At the peak of the Christmas season, they will average 75,000 daily clicks. To avoid unnecessary delays, and speed-up delivery by Christmas Eve, Postmaster Hogan advises every one to:

"Mail your Christmas presents for distant states immediately, and all others before Dec. 10. Christmas cards for out-of-town delivery should be posted before Dec. 15, and those with local addresses at least a week before Christmas.

"But first be sure that each gift is carefully wrapped and tied. Print the complete address, and return address, if your handwriting is at all shaky. We have already been forced to return many Christmas gifts as "undeliverable" for these two reasons."

At present, parcel post is considerably behind schedule. Only Christmas cards are being mailed with some consistency. Gratifying as this is, the postmaster anticipates still another rush when unexpected greetings breeze in from forgotten friends.

"Better pick up a few air mail and special delivery stamps today," he said. "It always happens!"

Bible Words for Today

1 CORINTHIANS 13:13—"So faith, hope, love abide, these three: but the greatest of these is love." (RSV)

• • •

What is it that Christ has done for us? Christ the author and finisher of our faith brings us face to face with our merciful loving Father. We realize now that love for God and love for one's fellows go hand in hand. God has been pictured to us as a God of wrath, a God of anger, a stern judge demanding justice. God may be pictured to us as one who punishes us when we break His commandments, but this is not the picture Christ gives us.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only Son, that whoever believes in Him should not perish but have eternal life." St. John in one of his letters puts it this way, "In this is love, not that we loved God but that He loved us and sent His Son." People knew of the mercy and love of God before Christ for God has never been without witness. "His mercy reacheth unto the heavens." "As a father loveth his own children so is God merciful". However the men of Christ's day and those before them for the most part talked of a God of judgement, a God of punishment, a God of justice who would give give people what they deserved. In the parable of the Laborers in the vineyard when the workmen received the same wages whether they worked one hour or ten, our Lord has shown us that God is more than just. Now men know that God is merciful, that God is love. We may still prefer our mean notions of God as a stern judge but in so far as we do we are less than Christian.

Christ has helped men the world over to travel the "more excellent way" which St. Paul describes in his famous chapter on love.

Many Famous Men Got Their Start By Pushing Doorbells

By HAL BOYLE

Bruce Barton sold cooking utensils from door to door to help pay his college tuition. Billy Graham toted around a well-known line of household brushes. Eric Johnston once was a vacuum cleaner salesman.

Arthur Godfrey, who later learned he could get into more living rooms via television than by knocking on front doors, in his youth sold cemetery lots for a time by house to house plugging.

They are just a few of the honored graduates of a form of direct selling, symbolized by the roving Yankee peddler, which began in this country almost as soon as the Pilgrims landed. Approximately a million Americans today devote all or part of their time to this kind of salesmanship. This huge army of doorbell ringers now sell items as small as a mail file, as large as an oak tree. (Fortunately, they don't have to carry sample oak trees in their daily rounds. Pictures will do.)

"Direct selling seems to rise and fall with the tempo of retailing generally," said George Graves, president of the National Assn. of Direct Selling Companies.

"There is no available census of the industry, but we estimate its volume at between two and four billion dollars a year."

His organization has quietly set about trying to stamp out unsavory practices in the industry. Member firms must subscribe and live up to a code of ethics. Crews of high pressure salesmen who move from town to town are frowned upon. So is the brassy, fast-talking fellow who wedges his foot in the housewife's door while he pours out a quick glib spiel about the wonders of a new can opener guaranteed to lighten her chores, improve her intellect and make her irresistible to her husband.

"The backbone of our industry is the sales representative who is known and respected in his own community," Graves said.

This kind of agent relies less and less on pushing a cold doorbell. He likes to arrange house parties at which he can demonstrate his wares to groups of clubwomen and neighboring housewives.

Who is engaged in this type of work and what are its rewards? A tree nursery firm specializing in direct selling found its agents ranged from 24 to 55 years of age, earned between $6,000 and $8,000 a year, and formerly had been employed as shipping clerks, garage attendants, and truck drivers.

The great problem in the industry is the turnover in sales agents, which averages more than 50 per cent a year.

"The reason for the turnover is the fact that many people take up direct selling for a single purpose," explained Graves. "They want to make enough money to buy new furniture, a TV set or a new car. When they've done that, they often drop out.

"But there is plenty of incentive for those who want to make it a life job."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Boyish Willie Mays, centerfielder for the world champion New York Giants and the National League's batting champion last season, has become the king of winter baseball in Puerto Rico. Here's a first-hand account of how he plys his trade amid the frenzy of the most rabid baseball fans in the world.

By SAUL PETT

SAN JUAN, P.R., Dec. 4 (AP)—In this tiny lush island, where baseball is both the national pastime and the national passion, the incomparable Weelie Mays of the Nueva York Gigantes has won the ultimo honor.

The fanaticos cheer him even when he belts a homer against their own club. For the average Puerto Rican fan to do this, while he's crying on the inside, is the last word in tribute to a hostile talent.

True, Weelie is a most formidable ballplayer, the star of the world champion N.Y. Giants, the National League's batting champion, the one, the only, the original "Say Hey" muchacho. And, when last seen playing winter ball down here, he was hitting .460. Or was it .640?

Even so, for a Puerto Rican fan to cheer when his heart is being crushed like a mangled mango, this is a most big thing to do, amigos.

Because nowhere does the flame of baseball partisanship burn hotter than in this five-team league which, though it plays only a 72-game season in a land with a population of 2,400,000, draws more than 700,000 paid admissions.

Every game between any two teams is a crucial Giants-Dodgers struggle, regardless of the standings. And every game between the two arch rivals of metropolitan San Juan—the San Juan Senadores (Senators) and the Santurce Cangregeros (Crabbers or Crabmen) is the World Series all over again.

They scream, they whistle, they hoot, they abuse. When a pitcher grows wobbly, they help him toward a latinized neurosis by waving handkerchiefs by the thousands to hasten his farewell. At a night game, partisan zeal is apt to explode into literal fireworks; last year fans stood up by the dozens and shot off Roman candles.

An umpire's call against the home team touches off bloodthirsty cries of "pillo! pillo!" (lowest kind of thief). When the tide suddenly turns in their favor, one group of fans yells across the field to rival fanaticos, "sulran!" (now you suffer).

There are many major leaguers playing beisbol, as they call it here, in Puerto Rico this winter and when one falls into a slump he is apt to hear from the stands, "Quiere irse en el avion." Translation: "He's asking for his plane ticket home."

If a team wins on the road, its bus frequently has to run through an ambush to get out of town—through narrow streets lined with screaming fans, shouting invective, throwing bottles, mud balls or oranges. Here they suck out the juice and throw the orange away.

While their partisanship runs high, the fanaticos will not long endure a consistently bad team. Several years ago the Caguas Criollos were doing poorly and their fans went on strike for two weeks. They picketed the park. They warned off any possible spectators with angry ultimatums delivered over microphones.

John L. Lewis never closed the coal mines tighter. For two weeks the Criollos played to completely empty stands. One visiting team owner lost so much money he couldn't afford a bus for remaining road trips. Simpatico friends lent their cars.

For some reason, in Puerto Rico a shutout is the disaster supremo. Sport has no greater shame, no deeper cause for personal mourning. The triumphant fans send a string of nine doughnuts to the losers. Leaving town after a shutout, the losing club may have to pass under a huge garland of doughnuts strung across the road.

The man who averts a shutout is a special hero. After a recent game which ended 9 to 1, the only baseball picture in the paper the next day was that of a player kissing his bat. He drove in the lone run.

"In Puerto Rico," said a local sports writer, "a fan knows that if his club loses he will be heckled by the guy next door for a few hours. But if his team is shut out, he will be needled for weeks.

And into this frenzy of partisan fire, William Howard Mays Jr. moves with the graceful aplomb of a man with nothing heavier on his mind than tomorrow's base hits or yesterday's comic books.

He remains sublimely unruffled whenever he is recognized, which is everywhere—in the ball park, in a store, on the street as he flashes by in his two-tone convertible.

On the streets, fans don't mob him, probably because they're too polite. But they smile an affectionate smile, they point, they pronounce his name (most often, "Weelie Mays" or "Weelie May") and then they just gape.

Willie landed in Puerto Rico at 5:30 a.m., Oct. 18, 1954 (Columbus landed here Nov. 19, 1492) and several hundred people were waiting at the airport. Had the plane come in at a decent hour, he would have been greeted by thousands.

Willie gets $1,000 a month and $250 in expenses to play with the Santurce Cangregeros, who average about four games a week. He lives in a small San Juan apartment just a few palm trees over from the ball park.

He takes his meals with Bill Gleason and his wife. Bill, a pitcher and Santurce teammate, is a St. Louis Cardinal farmhand during the regular season. In 1947, he and Willie broke in together with the Brimingham, Ala., Black Barons. In that year, Willie was paid $250 for the season. The other day, in San Juan, he bought some slacks and sport shirts. The bill: $201.

His closets bulge with clothes — he estimates his suits total between 15 and 20 — in quiet shades. He has many because (1) he likes nice clothes and (2) he thinks fans expect a ball player to dress well.

When I first caught up with him in San Juan, Willie was in bed, which was only natural since it was not yet noon. He averages 12 to 14 hours sleep a day.

Next to the bed was a record player stacked high with jazz and rhumbas. On the floor was a pile of comic books and pocket books, variously titled "My Own Romance," "True Love," "Dark Surrender" and "The Scarlet Venus."

But a short time later he was out at the ballpark, horseplaying in the pregame pepper, fighting for every turn at batting practice, yelping, hopping, joking, running like he had never had a tired moment in his life, like he hadn't played 151 games and a World Series for the Giants before coming to San Juan.

Since this was a Santurce-San Juan game, the stands were jammed to capacity plus — about 14,000, including 2,000 or 3,000 standing on the top row of the open, knockdown-type of bleachers beyond the outfield.

In the background were the technicolor Caribbean sky, Australian pines and palm trees and a tall scoreboard which featured something called "Situacion Don Q". This lights up when the bases are loaded and when a man then belts a homer he wins $100 from a rum maker named Don Q.

In the foreground were tightly packed stands full of fanaticos shaded from the blazing sun by umbrellas, big, floppy straw hats and score cards wrapped around their heads with handkerchiefs. Everywhere small boys were selling peeled oranges.

And behind home plate, on the ground and protected by chicken wire, was a special box reserved for the "Legislatura." It was jammed with excited senators and representatives of the government.

The legislators watch the game closely. Special committees of both houses govern the sale of tickets. At the end of the major league season, a joint resolution was passed unanimously praising Reuben Gomez, a local boy, for his work with the Giants. And when Gomez came home to pitch for the Cangregeros, he was welcomed by a nine-man committee, also selected by joint resolution.

At the other end of the "Legislatura" box sat Horace Stoneham, owner of the Giants, who had come to watch two of his most valuable properties perform — Mays and Gomez. Both did fine. Gomez pitched an easy victory. Willie went 3 for 5.

But both, I thought, made their owner wince with headlong slides which tumbled them on the hard, sun-baked infield, tore their uniforms and drew a little blood.

First time up, Willie got a thunderous hand. They yelled his name or chanted "Say Hey," 1,600 miles from the Polo Grounds. Then there was double thunder as Willie plastered a triple to left to drive in the first run.

Both Gomez and Mays were mobbed after the game. Kids in broad hats and bright shirts swarmed over the field. One boy, I noticed, kept rubbing his sneaker in the lime of the batter's on-deck circle. Why? Because, someone explained, when he got home he could prove he had knelt in the same historic circle 'Weelie' had.

The next morning, Willie showed up in a red plaid shirt, dark blue pants and black loafers for a road trip by bus to Mayaguez, on the other end of the island. It was only 80 miles but usually took four hours because of the winding road.

Willie appeared stunned by the brutally early hour—shortly before 9 a.m.—but his sense of humor began to revive him. Spotting a girl coming to work in a building across the street, he yelled out in a high, sing-song voice, "The bosman says you go home. You out of job." She laughed. He laughed.

Willie looked worried as I joined him for an interview.

He was, he said, pretty busy, playing ball "and everything." Nights, he went to the movies—"They speak in English but the writing comes in Spanish." Does he swim much? No, he didn't have enough time. Fish? No, he's "too impatient to fish."

Night clubs? Well, he went now and then to watch them dance the "Marenga," a bouncy import from the Dominican Republic. But usually, no. He didn't have time.

My first impression was that Willie was so busy his day was broken up into precious 15-minute segments, all spoken for. But as you talk to him, it becomes obvious that when Willie worries about time, he worries most about one thing—time enough to sleep.

The bus began to roll and Willie looked enviously at Hermann Franks, Giant, coach and manager of the Cangrejeros, and Hal Jeffcoat of the Chicago Cubs, who were settling down to a short nap. Willie braced himself to endure a few more questions.

At that point, he hadn't hit a homer yet. How come?

"I'm not swinging for 'em," Willie said.

How did he feel?

"Tired," he said. "The hot sun gets you. You take yesterday. I felt like going to sleep in centerfield."

Was he getting a little bored with baseball?

"A little," he allowed. "I don't care how much you like somethin', you do it too much you get tired. If I get too tired, I'll go home unless the club makes the (Caribbean) playoffs."

But then in the next breath, Willie lamented the fact that the kids don't play stickball in the streets down here the way they do up in Harlem. If they did, he'd play with them "maybe just 15 minutes at a time."

Just then a motorcycle cop pulled around the bus, his siren screaming. Willie opened the window and yelled. "Man, what you want here?" It soon became obvious.

We got a ticket for speeding. Everyone in the bus gave the cop a Bronx cheer except Willie, who laughed and laughed, and Pedro Zorilla, the club owner, who grumbled, "I know his face—he's a San Juan fan."

"Fans always ask me for a homer, just one," he said. "Hell you get one, they want more. You try for 'em you don't get 'em. I remember last season, I hit six homers in five games. They told me if I got another in the sixth game, I'd break some kind of a record. What happened? I couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

"If they hadn't told me, maybe I'd have done it. As it was, I hit a homer on the seventh day."

IT was a monumentally long speech. So we rested, listening to the music coming from the back of the bus. Some of the Puerto Rican boys were playing maracas and a drum or just beating old beer cans against the seats in a fine rhumba rythm.

We passed thick colorful foliage and little hills in the background, past white and pink houses in the small towns with their inevitable plazas and old churches. Suddenly the road broke out onto the beautiful turquoise Caribbean and I asked Willie if he was dating much down here.

Well, did he have any plans for marriage back in the states?

"Not me. I'm only 23. But when I do I'd like to have two boys. What I mean is, I'd like to have two kids. You start saying you want boys and you don't get 'em. It's like thinking of getting homers. You think about it and you don't get even a base hit."

When he recalls the past major league season, what does he think about most?

"But I don't think much about it. I'm not worrying about setting any records. I just want a good season. I got no time to think about it."

And with that, he pushed the seat back, yawned for the umteenth time and fell asleep within 30 seconds.

He also was the first man back on the bus. Laughing loudy, he tried to get a driver to pull away before everyone was aboard. Then, as we rolled down the winding, paved highway, he stood on the lower step, near the driver.

Suddenly he had a stick in his hand and was whacking his friend Greason on the head. Everyone was laughing as Willie beat out a rhumba rhythm. Then Greason grabbed and broke the stick and with the jagged end began to beat a tattoo on Willie's forehead.

One whack of that sharp end in the wrong place and the New York Giants would have had a one-eyed centerfielder. But Willie grew tired again and went to sleep. In the back, the musicians had quieted down for a game of gin rummy.

We were still out in the country, riding past sugar cane fields and groves of pineapple bushes and orange and banana trees. Along a highway, scattered groups of "jibaros" country folk saw the team name on our bus and jeered, hooted, whistle. We had passed over into Mayaguez territory.

Zorilla recalled that once last season, the Mayaguez fans got on a visiting Puerto Rican player warming up in the outfield. Someone threw a bottle. He threw it back. Then more bottles. And he threw them back, too, with deadly aim. Suddenly there was a wholesale riot of flying bottles until the cops rounded up the player and guilty fans and hauled them off to jail.

Hermann Franks said that was nothing, that we should have been in Venezuela last year where he managed a local club. Saul Rogovin, former Chicago White Sox pitcher, started one game by walking the first four batters. The incensed fans and local politicians thought he wasn't trying hard enough and had Rogvin thrown into jail for the rest of the afternoon. The next day home plate umpire spent three hours in jail because he called a crucial decision against the home club.

Even though things were quieter in Puerto Rico, Hal Jeffcoat warned me to keep the window closed after the Mayaguez game, especially if we won. The usual reaction, he said, was a barrage of bottles, oranges and mud balls. Zorilla said, "They don't really mean any harm." Jeffcoat said, "They sure looked mad."

The Mayaguez stadium was filled with about 6,000 fans. Beyond the outfield, hundreds of men and boys poured in free over the wall and the cops looked away with amused resignation. Beyond left field was a huge mango tree sagging with the weight of humanity.

Up in the stands, some men wearing huge sombreros were playing guitars, a clave, trumpet, maracas and a marimbola. It would be nice to report that they came down spontaneously from the hills to root and play for their home team. But commercialism is not bound by oceans. On their big hats, they wore big ads—for local night clubs.

Stoneham, the Giants owner, arrived late just in time to see Mays, the first time up, belt his first homer of the local season—a 400-shot over left-center. In the next three games, Stoneham saw Willie belt three more homers and a week later he signed him to a new Giant contract for $25,000 a year.

Willie's first homer stunned the partisan crowd but they applauded because this was an event of formidable magnitude. He got a double before rain ended the game after the fifth inning with the visitors leading the Mayaguez Indios 5 to 0. It was an official ball game but under local rules would have to be finished at a later date.

For that reason, the crowds in the streets were relatively kind as our bus rolled out of town. The kids called us names, the men jeered, the women laughed, and only a few oranges were thrown. But Weelie Mays, in war and peace, slept all the way home, naturalmente.

Lillian Gish Is Surprised At Crusade

Simply put, blonde Miss Gish—who along with sister Dorothy made stage and silent movie history when Dad was a sprout—feels the nation needs one more man in Ike's Cabinet, a secretary of fine arts to build up cultural well-being.

She has been thinking it over for 15 years, and never told anyone. Finally she wrote her ideas down for a book that's coming out shortly ("Custodians of the Future") then happened to mention it on a television show the other night.

"People have been calling up and writing me ever since. I tell them 'Don't come to me. I'm just a woman. Nobody's behind me. Write your congressman and senator.'"

Miss Gish, who looks as fragile as she did in "Birth of a Nation," but who stubbornly sticks to her argument, says a department of fine arts would include such things as architecture and textiles as well as stage, films, literature, painting and sculpture.

"Practically everybody in the country has someone they can run to in Washington to take care of them when things go wrong—except people in the arts," says Lillian, clasping her fingers.

"Culturally we are weak. We are not spiritually wanting, but we need to put the props under culture. We shouldn't have to leave it to other countries to recognize our great artists with prizes.

"We think too much about material things. Some things are beyond money. Money is bread. But the Good Book says we shan't live by bread alone."

Basically, the Gish idea is a federal agency to supervise, encourage and sponsor all artistic endeavor, set up national theaters such as France and Sweden have, and recognize superior talents with some form of awards.

Networks Dip, Single Radio Stations Gain

Conflicting diagnoses have been heard in recent days from several top industry figures—who should know the answers. But out of these confusing bedside bulletins these appear to be the facts:

1. Network radio business has been declining and some in the industry have raised the question of whether all four nationwide chains will survive.

2. Individual stations have been holding their own or gaining, and over-all radio broadcast business is near record levels, or close to half billion dollars a year.

3. Radio, according to Nielsen Audience Surveys, still reaches more people in daytime hours than television, but TV moves into a big lead at night.

The controversy was touched off recently when David Sarnoff, the board chairman of Radio Corp. of America and the subsidiary National Broadcasting Co., told NBC affiliates there is "only one direction, incomewise, for radio networks to go, and that is down instead of up." He added "it may yet be possible to eke out a poor existence for radio networks, but I don't know."

This brought roars of protests from heads of other networks, including a particularly tart comment from Dr. Frank Stanton, president of Columbia Broadcasting System. Hi network's publicity office issued a release quoting him as saying "those who do not believe in it (radio) should make way for people who do." But the same office 14 days later issued another release beginning "CBS radio will reduce cost-to-advertisers of its network evening time an average of approximately 20 per cent" two weeks from that date. It was one of several reductions in radio network night rates since TV began cutting into evening audiences.

Meanwhile, Sarnoff's comments had led to speculation that NBC might be planning to drop its radio network, and he followed up with a statement saying that if any nets dropped out NBC "would be the last, and not the first, to abandon the field." He added that his intention in his earlier talk was "to call attention to the realities."

As for figures, the latest report of Publishers Information Bureau indicates total network broadcast time sales for the four nationwide radio chains in the first nine months of this year ran more than 12 per cent behind a year ago—104 million dollars against nearly 119 million. ABC radio with a slight gain ran counter to the trend.

But total business of all stations, including both independents and network affiliates, plus the networks' own gross, is expected to approximate 500 million dollars for the full year, about the same as in 1953 and more than 65 per cent above 1948 when TV still was in its infancy.

The number of radio stations, meanwhile, has increased from about 1,800 in 1948 to more than 2,600 standard stations now, and the total number of sets in use has increased.

The decline in importance and popularity of network radio shows has been accompanied by an increasing reliance on local programs or recorded shows broadcast on a local basis. Individual radio stations have been withstanding TV competition better than network radio.

Marlon Brando portrays a man who lives by the jungle law, a small time hoodlum and ex-pugilist who dwells in the slums where the city meets the sea in Columbia's picture, "On the Waterfront." The poignant new drama of love and terror is now playing at the Uptown Theatre. Eva Marie Saint, lovely blonde television star, makes her movie debut in the picture and she is great.

Americans Have Sudden Surge Of Interest In Reaching 100

By HAL BOYLE

There is a sudden new surge of interest in America in how one can live to be 100 years old.

The gland meddlers and the nostrum peddlers are pumping up the idea now that the average man should breeze through an entire century before the wheezing breath of time whispers into his dulling ear, "Tag, boy, you've had it."

They hold out the golden hope they can stay the steady onset of age, keep a man young and energetic years behind the prime his grandfather knew, and win him the joys of a supple centenarian.

To these pseudo-medical dreams of a boyish or girlish antiquity for all, I cry rubbish. Who, in heaven's despite, yearns for a world in which the ordinary guy is born with the depressing prospect he will live to be 100 years old, whether he needs them all or not?

I remember years ago reading with strong distaste the desperate grasp on life by the elder John D. Rockefeller, one of the richest men of his day. He lived well into his nineties, became a shrivelled husk of a man huddled in a blanket as he sat on an automatic turntable geared to give him the benefit of the moving sun.

The man enriched medicine and mankind with his philanthropic millions. But the best doctors dollars could rent weren't able to keep him alive to blow out the candles on the 100th anniversary of his birth. It is unnecessary to point out that a number of obscure men and women of his generation who never went to a doctor outlived him.

The big new idea now is that with proper nutrition and fresh forms of abracadabra—including a wary avoidance of chickenpox while young—a man cannot only expect to live to be 100 but be hale and happy right up to the end. Presumably he then will just fall apart all at once, worn out smoothly and equally in all parts, like the wonderful one hoss shay that lived 100 years and a day.

The guy who wrote about the one hoss shay was a doctor, and a wise man, and had a son who was wise, too, and lived into his nineties—but neither father nor son made it to 100.

To most of us, since we cannot live forever, it is more important to use our time on earth well rather than to cheapen our golden days by stretching them into a longer pewter string.

1. The human heart has only about 2 billion—or is it 3 billion?—beats built into it. Wear it out by making it beat a bit faster for something you believe in besides yourself.

2. Count no day lost on which you fail to get your proper dose of vitamins but are surprised by fun.

3. Don't miss the pleasure of wandering in bed to save your strength for tomorrow's sunshine.

4. It is better to explore life half-sick afoot than it is to lie on your back reading a book on how to be healthy.

5. Remember that time isn't a calendar on a wall but a clock that ticks within you, that moments of flooding joy are better than barren years, and a crowded hour that measures your mettle as a man will make you a wider life than the pointless, purposeless endurance of an empty century.

Life becomes a form of death when fierceness dies in the purpose of the heart; the turning pages of the calendar cease to be a chronicle and are a daily epitaph of one who has put mere existence above the art of living.

Wayne Says It's Coincidence That He Marries Latin Girls

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—John Wayne says he has no special preference for Latin gals. It's just coincidence that he happens to marry them.

Last month the lumbering actor took his third bride, thereby keeping his record intact. Here's how it shapes up: No. 1—Josephine Saenz, daughter of a Dominican diplomat; No. 2 — Esperanza Baur, Mexican movie actress; No. 3—Pilar Palette, Peruvian beauty.

"I've never been conscious of going for any particular type," protests Wayne. "They say a man follows a pattern, but I haven't been aware of it myself. Each of the women I married has been entirely different.

"I certainly don't have anything against American women. As a matter of fact, my wives have been as much American as they have been Latin. None of them speaks with an accent.

"My first wife had a French and Spanish mother and father, but she was brought up in Texas. Esperanza spent a lot of time in this country, not here, but in Florida and elsewhere. And Pilar has been here a great deal and speaks English perfectly."

I asked him if Pilar will pursue her acting career, and he replied with an emphatic no.

"She never had much of a career," he explained. "Once Sol Lesser sent a crew to Peru to make a picture about hunting Inca gold, and they needed a girl to walk in front of the camera with bare feet and long hair. She did it. Then an independent producer went down there to make a picture, using amateur actors, and she was in it. But I don't think the picture was ever released here."

Wayne said that he and his bride will have a honeymoon—at home. They've been traveling all over the world, he explained, and will be happy to sit by the hearth for a while. He still has a week's work to go in "The Sea Chase," and it can't finish too soon for him.

Autry Predicts Long Success For Westerns

NEW YORK, Dec. 4 (AP)—Gene Autry predicts the cowboy and the Western will be around for generations yet because "they're part of the national heritage of this country."

The millionaire cowpoke is unworried about being superseded by the space pockey. A man on a horse he says, is a symbol of pioneer America that will endure.

Autry, star of television, radio, the movies and records, explains that "when you think of George Washington, you think of him riding a white horse.

"It's the same with other heroes of the early days of our country. And the cowboy epitomizes the American pioneer."

"I would say that in my business the horse probably is responsible for 50 per cent of the popularity of most Western stars," he declares.

He qualifies his statement to refer only to performers who make a career of Westerns as he does.

"I know Champion gets fan mail addressed to him just as I do," he says.

The cowboy has a big advantage over the space jockey so far as kids are concerned because of the gear required for each, he declares.

The space suit with its plastic helmet, he says, is difficult to put on and not too practical for play. But a cowboy outfit is practical to wear and lets the youngster romp to his heart's content.

Aside from his income from his shows on CBS radio and television, his phonograph records and his six movies a year, he owns three radio stations, two television stations, a movie producing and distributing firm and two music publishing firms, and is a partner in a huge ranch in Arizona and has oil interests in Texas.

A filmed report for the layman on current progress in cancer research is scheduled for a TV preview on "American Inventory" on NBC tomorrow afternoon. The film was produced by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation and will be offered on a loan basis to schools, medical groups and other organizations.

There's often more excitement behind the scenes than on screen in Ed Murrow's Person to Person on CBS-TV.

There was the time Martha Raye was to be interviewed from her home in Westport, Conn., into which cameras had been moved.

Before air time a power failure developed and it wasn't cleared up until three minutes before the show began.

Earlier this month, Janet Leigh was interviewed in her own home in Hollywood not by Murrow but by her husband Tony Curtis in an apparent change of pace. But it wasn't planned that way. The voice circuit from New York to Hollywood was temporarily out of order so they couldn't hear Murrow, and Tony stepped in to conduct the interview.

Just seconds beofre air time for another show, part of the ceiling of Eartha Kitt's newly decorated apartment fell. And there was the time when the microphone was moved up close to Janet Gaynor's pet birds to catch their singing. They wouldn't peep.

Your sterling silver hollow ware can do double duty. A pretty silver pitcher can be used for flowers; cold meats look attractive on a silver sandwich tray; a silver sauce boat may be filled with tidbits served with a first-course beverage on days when sauce is not on the menu.

A rousing adventure of pioneer California is recounted in "Passion for Vengeance," in Technicolor, opening today at the Fox Theatre. Yvonne De Carlo and Cornel Wilde are starred, with Lon Chaney and Raymond Burr in support.

Crossing The Arctic

By Bruce Biossat

Passengers on regular commercial aircraft who can look down on ice-clogged polar seas must imagine they are having a dream.

Even in this day of remarkable air exploits, it is still hard to believe that man has arrived at the stage where scheduled airline operations across the Arctic are safe and practical. But that is now the case.

Scandinavian Airlines has inaugurated two flights weekly each way from Los Angeles and Copenhagen, Denmark. The distance of 5,800 miles will normally be covered in around 27 hours.

Not without significance is the fact that Russians pioneered cross-Arctic flying 17 years ago with an historic trip to California. Then it had to be done without major weather and navigational aids.

Today the general area traversed by the Scandinavian Airlines route is marked by many weather and radio stations which can assist aircraft spanning the icy wastes. Some indication of the confidence these aids inspire can be gather from the distinguished passenger list on the first westbound flight. Prince Axel of Denmark, three Nordic premiers and a host of other important persons made the trip.

No doubt these flights will ordinarily come to be viewed as no less routine than standard transoceanic filghts to Europe and the Far East. Yet it's still fair to say that the air passenger seeking adventure is more likely to get a sense of it from the new Arctic route than any other way.

The northern passage has other meanings, obviously. It dramatizes the accessibility of Europe and Asia to our military aircraft flying the Arctic and makes it plain the Russians work the same strategy in reverse.

The northern door to America is no longer safely shut while we try to guard our Atlantic and Pacific coasts from threat of hostile planes. We may have known this for some time, but the reality of commercial flying over the Arctic must surely heighten our concern for the defense of this continent and our own borders.

We can be thankful that an airline representing free Europe is operating over this route. For as we have been benefiting recently from data compiled by Canadian as well as American-manned Arctic weather and radio stations, so we may expect to be given all useful flying data amassed on Scandinavian's now regular flights.

Both commercially and militarily the importance of this development is clear. But its meaning is greater. It is another triumph of man's spirit. The air conquest of the Arctic represents his successful intrusion into one of the last and most forbidding of the earth's great wastelands.

Treatment Of Tuberculosis Has Improved Over the Years

By Edwin P. Jordan, M.D.

There is scarcely a family of a generation ago which did not lose loved ones from tuberculosis. Today the situation is vastly different and many of us have not lost a close relative from this disease for forty years or more.

But tuberculosis is not yet wiped out even though the end is in sight — providing we actually use those methods of fighting it which are now known. To win this war is important since advanced tuberculosis is a danger to life and less severe forms are a hazard to others since the germ which causes it is most commonly carried from one person to another.

Treatment of tuberculosis has been greatly improved over the years and young Bill who might have died from it 50 years ago today stands a good chance of recovery and getting back to his job. His chances are better, though, if the disease is found early, and he is not so likely to infect his wife and kids.

For this reason one of the most hopeful developments of recent years which may yet drive the final nail in the coffin of tuberculosis is the community survey.

Thanks to technical improvements with the use of X-rays it is now possible to take tiny films of the chest of millions of people at small cost. These miniature X-ray films are not quite as reliable as the full-sized ones, but they do reveal anything suspicious and if they do, a regular film can be made.

What makes these small films particularly valuable is that they can be made on so many people and thus serve to discover unsuspected cases of the disease in the early curable stage. Also it makes it possible to stop the spread of germ to others so that eventually there should be no one left from whom to catch the disease though this happy day is not around the corner.

In this discussion of tuberculosis mention may be made also of one other matter about which there is wide interest. This is the attempt to build up resistance to tuberculosis in individuals by vaccination with a substance known as BCG. This has been in use for a great many years but because of a most unfortunate accident in Germany shortly after the vaccine was introduced (which proved due to a mistake rather than the result of the use of the vaccine in proper form) this method of vaccination has never come into wide use.

Nevertheless there is now a vast amount of evidence which indicates that BCG is of distinct value in the protection from tuberculosis and while it will take years to decide on its full value its use under certain conditions in order to build up individual resistance to tuberculosis seems to be well worth while. Thus the campaign goes forward.

Shock!

Rep. Oakley Hunter (R., Calif.) tells the story of an old government worker who took a fancy to a fresh young thing assigned to his office as a new secretary.

Whereupon the old man fainted.

When he revived, the secretary gave him a puzzled look and said, "I know you must have been terribly disappointed by my refusal, but why did you have to faint?"

"It wasn't disappointment," the bureaucrat answered. "It was just that in all the years I have been in government this was the first time I ever got a definite answer on anything."

Wife's Actions Have a Lot To Do With Mate's Success

By Ruth Millett

You have a lot to do with whether or not others regard your husband as a successful man.

As his wife you are either a good manager who can get the most out of every dollar he earns, or you are an indifferent manager who thinks the only way for the family to have more is for the husband to earn more.

As his wife you make sure that the world knows you have respect for your husband's abilities and opinions or you show little faith in his ability.

As his wife you can choose for your friends couples who are stimulating and from whom you can both learn or you can waste leisure time on dull, uninteresting people.

Encourage Mate to Better Himself

As his wife you can encourage your husband to take a chance—when the chance taken is a reaching out for something better—or you can hold him back by throwing a wet blanket on his plans to get ahead.

As his wife you can encourage him to be dissatisfied with his job and critical of his associates by pointing out every injustice you see and every fault, or you can encourage him to feel that he is appreciated and to see the best in the peopde who work with him.

As his wife you can show the world the face of a woman who wouldn't trade places with ayone else, or you can talk "poor mouth" and troubles until you sell the idea that you didn't marry as well as you could have.

No matter what his job or his income—you, as his wife, have a lot to do whether or not the world thinks your husband is a successful man.

Social Order

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, recently gave the students of Seton Hall University, South Orange, N. J., an example of how not to maintain the social order. By that he meant a harmonious relationship between all elements of the national economy. He told them the story of an harassed French pastor of a small, poor country parish.

"It seems this pastor had a curate who loved animals, and he had a pet goat which he kept in his house. The pastor, irritated, finally told the curate that he would either have to get rid of the goat or else keep it outside the rectory.

"The curate complied, but the first night he turned the goat outside, it bleated so piteously that he got out of bed and let the goat in the house again. Next morning the pastor found the goat comfortably asleep in his favorite chair. That was the end.

"The pastor went to the bishop, who listened to the tale of woe. He observed that every time he had visited the rectory he had found the house stuffy because the windows were closed. The bishop said he thought the odor of the goat would be easier to bear if the pastor opened the windows.

"'Oh, but I couldn't do that,' replied the pastor. 'If I opened the windows my pigeons would fly away.'"

Patience and Fortitude

British Historian Arnold Toynbee, on his Washington visit to promote sales of his monumental ten-volume "Study of History," sums up his findings of the whole work in one neat phrase:

"We can't just fold our hands and let history rip," he says.

His ten-volume job is a study of ten civilizations of the past and why they fell, with an eye and what might happen to modern civilization.

What's needed now are practical alternatives to mass suicide via the nuclear bombs. "How can we keep our fears and pride from getting the better of us?" he asks. "How can we get along without having to annihilate each other?"

His own answer is that "Patience and fortitude are what we need." Patience is what we need to overcome our pride—our desire to be the chosen people and to conquer the world. Fortitude is needed to overcome our fears.

Protest

National Temperance League, Inc., has made a public protest over the appointment of Robert L. King, vice president and general manager of Southern Comfort Distillery, St. Louis, as administrative assistant to Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Pointing out that if President Eisenhower should die, Mr. King would be in direct line to become administrative assistant to the new President, Clayton M. Wallace, NTL executive director, says:

"Without reflecting in the slightest on Mr. King's ability and qualifications in espionage matters, friends of temperance throughout America will feel that the naming of a high official in the liquor industry to such a key position where he may have to represent the administration on temperance legislation (among other things) is most inadvisable."

Proper Respect

It takes something extra to shock a Washington press photographer, but the cameramen were really offended by the rudeness of some of the bystanders when Queen Mother Elizabeth visited the capital.

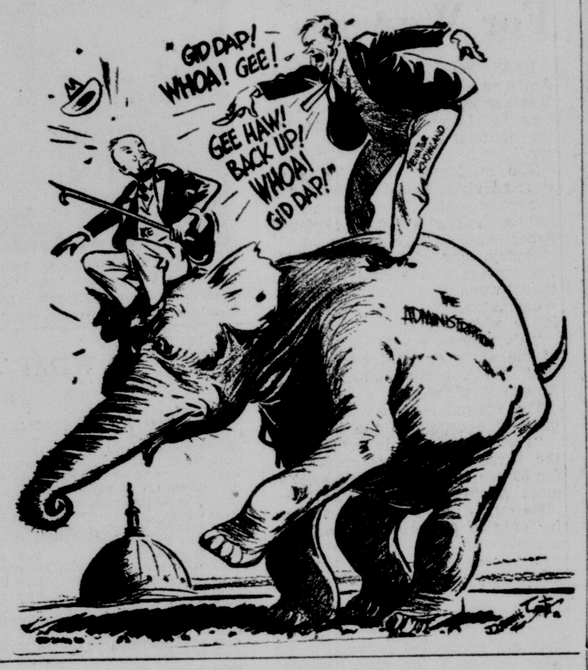
Fall Guy

At his first press conference since the big rhubarb over his "hound dog" crack during the campaign, Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson took a sharp dig at reporters. He was discussing international tensions, and said the U.S. should not add heat to them.

"You guys, you know, are guilty of adding heat to them sometimes, too," said the secretary, deadpan. Then he added: "But you usually get some fall guy to hang it on."

Back-Seat Driver



The Gift

Let not the spirit die in man
While he still lives, I pray,
A smile or cheery word now can
So brighten up his day;
If he possess none of wealth,
If years of life slip by,
If he has lost his youth or health,
Let not his spirit die;
But open up your church door wide
And bid him enter there,
And everyone who goes inside
Must let him know they care,
Don't let him say he's wanted not,
This man who's old and poor,
This man who all but God forgot
Is knocking at your door;
It seems a little bit absurd
That there are men about
Who need but just a kindly word
To make the sun come out,
Who need a little friendly chat
To make their spirits soar
And yet, so many just like that Need this—and nothing more;
And so the Christmas time comes on,
The season of giving
A word or so—and when you're gone
He'll think that life's worth living;
No offerings, no gifts you give,
No matter how high priced,
A simple gift to Christ.

Earl Wilson's Column Has Recent Write-Up on Ann Baker

Ann Baker, Sedalia's famous daughter, who is now playing "Corliss Archer" on TV, was recently written up in Earl Wilson's column, "The Midnight Earl."

What Earl Wilson has to say about Ann follows:

I'm now at the dangerous age.

Yes, my son Slugger's turning 12 . . . and I'm told that can be dangerous for parents.

So I went to see Ann Baker . . . who spies on teen-agers.

Playing teen-age "Corliss Archer" on TV, she, like Peter Lorre, has "gotta have the information." Sometimes she spies near Magnolia High in North Hollywood. Sometimes the little boys she's spying on whistle.

"I wondered how the girls got those bluejeans to fit that way," Ann told me, in Sardi's, while visiting New York.

"They put on a new pair and jump in a swimming pool. They let the jeans dry on them, first fitting them to their legs."

"How do they feel after that?" I asked. "Very wet?"

"Very tight!" replied Miss Baker.

It's only four years since Ann was "Miss Jeans Queen" of Sedalia, Mo., home town also of Jack Oakie. But spying on the teeners, she's amazed how swiftly their fads change.

"Holy Cow," "My gollieeze," "Jeeze" and "Golly Mum" are still common teen terms. Lately everything is "very rank"—it smells.

Miss Baker is now growing up—and some people wonder if she won't outgrow the ponytailed, shoed teen-ager she's playing. She's sort of promised her bosses that she won't get married or do anything else foolish like that.

She lives in Encino, not far from Clark Gable's place.

"I've never seen the man, though I've looked out my window many mornings!" she said.

However, her disguise as a teen-ager seems to be working still. For at a recent kid party, she dropped in on, a boy about Slugger's age sat down beside her and started snuggling.

"What grade are you in?" he finally asked . . . and Ann knew she was still O.K.

Madness In The Spring

XXXV

NEXT morning Greg found it hard to tear himself away from the activities of the town, so genuine that it was incredible to realize he had been responsible for them himself, and go to Daggett. The old man was already awake, in an exhuberant mood, and determined to miss nothing that was going on. For the first time in weeks—for the last time, perhaps—Greg dressed him and, after he had eaten his breakfast, helped him to walk a little.

He clung to Greg's arm, his eyes roving alertly. "This is what it was like," he said in a tone of satisfaction.

"I figure," Greg told him, "that the best vantage point will be that big window in the hotel lobby. That will give you a box seat for everything that goes on because the telecasting of the speech and the parade will be done there."

He tightened his hold on the old man's arm as the boardwalks began to fill up with men in riding boots, their spurs jingling. Daggett tired soon and made no objection when Greg steered him into the hotel and settled him in a comfortable armchair.

Rupert came up in costume, looking dashing but nervous. Like Greg, he was aware that, with the arrival of Horace Crain, he must change his allegiance, that the break with Wade Daggett lay at hand.

"I have been wondering, sir, how one says thank you for a new life."

"By using it," Daggett told him. "Really using it. I don't mind mistakes but I do hate waste!"

Kirby joined them, dapper, alert, in high spirits, and the lobby of the hotel began to fill up with technicians, while photographers set up their cameras.

Long before the stage coach, the covered wagon, and the chartered buses had arrived from the station, a steady line of traffic came across the Badlands, raising a cloud of yellow dust: new cars, old cars and a surrey, a few Indians on ponies. The Chamber of Commerce cowboys swaggered down the road and a man came from the stable bringing a horse bearing a side saddle.

Daggett leaned forward, gripping Greg's arm. "There they come," he said in excitement. "On your way, young man."

Dust swirled in the distance, a horseshoe struck a pebble with a ringing sound, there was a chorus of "Yippee" and a rattle of shots, and around the bluff came the stagecoach at full gallop, the covered wagon swaying behind, accompanied by cowboys, riding, shouting and shooting. Flashlight bulbs went off, the horses reared back as the stagecoach came to a dramatic halt. Greg ran forward to open the door.

• • •

HORACE CRAIN stepped out, waved for the photographers, and turned to give Millicent his hand. She, too, faced the cameras, smiling, lovely and gracious.

Daggett watched Greg move forward to greet her, his shy smile lighting up his face as he answered her eager questions, and observed with satisfaction that the cornbread king shook hands heartily with his stepson.

"Where's that girl?" Daggett muttered. "I don't see her—oh!"

"Oh!" Rupert echoed in a meaning tone.

Kirby had set Hannah on her feet but momentarily forgot to release her. She wore a black divided skirt that swept the ground, and a stiff hat, revealing shining pale hair brushed smoothly. Her eyes looked enormous. Kirby lifted her into the side saddle.

Rupert's lips twitched in sardonic amusement. "At times," he commented to Daggett, "I have cast you in many roles, but I never thought of you as Pandarus."

"We're on in five minutes," called on of the technicians. There was a bustle, much low-voiced checking of apparatus and frantic running to and fro. The Crains had been escorted to the lobby by Kirby and a stout man who seemed to be on the verge of apoplexy and whose function was not clear to Daggett.

• • •

KIRBY stood ready, a different Kirby, the expert, the man who was at home in his job and liked it.

"One minute."

Daggett saw Rupert hovering nearby, waiting to meet Horace Crain when the telecast was over. Hannah sat on her horse outside the window, her eyes on Millicent Crain, her dream in shreds like a spiderweb torn by a broom.

The stout man stood with raised arm, eyes on his watch. Then the arm dropped and Philip Kirby said, "This is Phil Kirby speaking and welcoming you to Crain's Canned Cornbread hour and an hour of life as it was actually lived in a pioneer town. But, first, a word from our announcer."

The stout man said, "Yes, friends, we are bringing you America and that great American product, cornbread." He held up a can. "The kind mother used to make."

Daggett, watching the colorful crowds outside, lost trace of the commercial and the crying need for doing something today. His attention was recaptured when Horace Crain was introduced. The great man, who had been beaming benevolently, dried up suddenly, his mouth gaping like a fish out of water. Then he recovered and began to read the speech which had been prepared for him.

XXXVI

WHEN Horace Crain came to the end of his speech, Kirby stepped forward again. "And now," he cried enthusiastically, "we'll turn back the clock and give you a day in Dead Man's Gulch." There was a pistol shot and the parade started to move: the covered wagon pursued by Indians, a mimic stagecoach robbery punctuated by blank cartridges; cowboys doing fancy riding; somewhere toward the end of the procession Hannah rode alone followed to her immense surprise by whistles. When the parade had streamed past the windows, Daggett saw Rupert holding forth to a group of dazzled women and an old-timer selling miniature covered wagons that were to be used as cigaret boxes.

The passing crowd blurred, became dreamlike. "The time of my life," Daggett thought contentedly.

At some point he dozed and realized it when he opened his eyes to see the lengthening shadows and Greg once more at his side. Quite a little group had collected, among them the Crains and Rupert and Kirby. Hannah stood by herself in the background. Daggett experienced an old man's embarrassment at being caught napping.

Crain was beaming. "Wonderful place you've got here, Mr. Daggett I'd have come just to meet you. Want to know what you've got that brought out that young man of mine. I've already had some telegrams. The first reactions are tremendous." He turned to his wife. "Milicent, my dear, my public relations man suggests you stroll down the road with him and meet some of these good people."

His wife gave him her slow, lovely smile. "If you want me to appear at the dance tonight," she said gently, a touch of steel in her voice, "I must have some rest now. I shall be in my room for the next couple of hours and I do hope it won't be necessary to disturb me."

Hannah's eyes followed the graceful woman thoughtfully as she went out of the lobby and up the stairs of the hotel. She could, as she had supposed, learn a great deal from Greg's mother.

Crain watched his wife with an expression of pride and pleasure. He turned back to Daggett. "My boy here," and he patted Greg's shoulder, "has come across in fine fashion."

"It was all Mr. Daggett," Greg said.

• • •

IF the day had been noisy, the night was wild. A gun fight carefully stage-managed competed with the music of the square dances. Everyone was happy. Everyone was having a wonderful time.

Greg looked in at the dance hall. Rupert was dancing with Milicent Crain. Greg looked around for Hannah but she was not there.

Hannah was probably with Kirby though Greg had expected Kirby to be in the center of a crowd somewhere. Kirby had surprised him, he'd been so good at his job, light-hearted, quick-witted, with an infectious kind of enthusiasm that generated more of the same.

Then the door opened and Hannah made a spectacular appearance, wearing a trailing Lillian Russell dress of dark red velvet, her hair piled in little curls on her head, a big plumed hat slanting over one eye, glamorous, glowing.

Greg was lost in the stampede. It was late before he had a chance to dance with Hannah and then he was not sure that he enjoyed it. He held her in his arms but the body he held was encased in a rigid corset. Hannah was remote in other ways, too. She did not ask about his trip. She did not apologize for having left the old man. Her attention was on the crowded floor, not on him.

"Uncle Wade told me."

Greg was outraged. "Don't you care?" When she made no reply he said crossly, "I wish you'd take off that confounded hat. I can't see your face." They were near the door and he led her outside. "It's hot in here. Let's walk."

"I don't want to," Hannah objected. "I'd ruin this trailing skirt."

• • •

GREG was taken aback. To the best of his knowledge, she had invariably agreed to any suggestion that was made to her. He picked her up, lifted her onto the seat of the covered wagon and scrambled up beside her. Lights from the ballroom made her bare shoulders look like thick cream, but her face was still in shadow.

"What are you figuring on doing?" he asked as the silence lengthened.

"I want to get married," Hannah said simply.

"Well, for heaven's sake!" Greg loosened his collar. "Why couldn't you say so? Do you want one of those fussy public weddings so you can furnish your house by blackmailing other people into giving you presents, or just a private one?"

She pulled off the big hat and dropped it on her lap. He could see her face now, the eyes huge and shadowy, Rossetti eyes, the mouth full and warm and sweet.

"If that is supposed to be a proposal," she said breathlessly, but with a hint of steel in her voice, "you'll have to do better than that."

Down the dusty road a man staggered, talking loudly to himself. "A woman always has her revenge ready. Moliere." Kirby declaimed to the night. "Every woman should marry and no man. Disraeli. A woman is necessarily an evil. Menander."

Greg laughed. "Benedict the married man. Shakespeare." He took her in his arms.

Public Library Notes—

Grove's Dictionary of Music And Musicians Is Available

"Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians," in nine volumes, is a valuable new source of reference added to the Sedalia Public Library. This is the fifth edition of the dictionary since its first publication in 1878-89. With its expansion to nine volumes, the new Grove covers every musical subject, many background topics, and unquestionably constitutes the world cyclopedia of music.

Some of its contents are: the complete lists of every composition of the greater masters and of many operatic composers; the cross references which give all literary works which have been used by composers for operas, ballets, choral works, symphonic poems, overtures, songs, film and radio music; the chronology of composers from 1,400 to the present, showing contemporaries in other arts; a comprehensive article on folk music of all the Western nations by contributors from 38 countries.

The latest technical advances are described in articles on film music, radio transmission, ear-training and sound. Other new articles deal with liturgical music, drama, criticism, and music teaching.

The illustrations of the new Grove Dictionary are also outstanding with 76 photogravure plates, 16 in full color. There are, as well, numerous drawings or diagrams, and hundreds of musical examples.

Another unique volume of interest to musicians and students of music is "The Ascap Biographical Dictionary of Composers, Authors and Publishers," which contains information not available from any other source—the life stories, principal works, addresses, etc., of virtually every important American composer and lyric writer of today.

This new revised edition recently received by the Public Library contains 2171 composers and writers of lyrics, 402 publishers of music. Some 1,400 are writers of popular music and of production music for stage, screen, radio and television.

Biographical material by well-known musicians is also found in "Old Friends and New Music," by Nicolas Nabokov, and "My Life In Music," by John Erskine. Many other books on music and musicians will be found both in the reference room at the library and in the circulation department.

Regional Library Notes—
Receives Second Quarterly State Aid Check --- $2,312.16

The Boonslick Regional Library has just received its second quarterly state aid check for this fiscal year, amounting to $2,312.16. This amount is apportioned to the three cooperating libraries with Boonville Municipal Library receiving $55.65, Cooper County $1,281.25, and Pettis County $975.26.

Since the state aid checks for this year are larger than the library had anticipated, at the November board meeting it was decided that an additional $2,000.00 might be spent for books. This will allow $10,700 for books this fiscal year in addition to $1,739.51 for books from the special Adult Education Grant from the American Library Association. $14,876.14 was spent for books during the last fiscal year which ended April 30, 1954.

The trustees and citizens division of the Missouri Library Association accepted the invitation to meet in the Boonslick Library area for their district meeting in the spring of 1955. At this board meeting it was decided that the meeting be held in Sedalia. Mrs. Olen Monsees, Smithton, is chairman of the program committee and the Rev. G. S. Is Confident Sen. Knowland Will Keep Post

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Millikin (R-Colo) said today he is confident Sen. Knowland of California will continue as Senate Republican leader despite a sharp party division over condemnation of Sen. McCarthy's conduct.

Among GOP senators, 22 voted for condemnation and 22 against. Forty-four Democrats and Sen. Morse (Ind-Ore) made the final tally 67-22 in favor of rebuking the Wisconsin Republican.

Knowland was one of the 22 Republicans opposing condemnation. This group included several senators who share Knowland's views on U.S. policy in Asia, and Sen. Aiken (R-Vt) suggested this played a part in the balloting. Knowland's views on Asia recently have been in apparent conflict with those of the Eisenhower administration.

Referring to the possible effect of the McCarthy debate on Knowland's position as party leader, Chairman Millikin of the GOP Senate Conference said in an interview:

"I feel certain he will be retained. . .I do not believe there will be a permanent division in the Republican organization of the Senate."

Several others expressed the same view and Knowland said, "I don't think the alleged cleavage is as deep as some say."

Ready Made Lighted Holiday Decorations Give Home Owners Wide Choice of Decorating Themes

By George Howard
General Electric
Holiday Lighting Specialist

Decorating your home for the holidays is one way of sharing your Yuletide spirit with friends and neighbors. Whether you choose a religious theme or feature the familiar old St. Nick, you will find a wide selection of ready made lighted decorations to add points of interest to your display.

Giant candles, life size three dimensional Santas and snowmen of sturdy, weatherproof plastic are only a few of the many lighted items from which to choose this year. Lighted plaques depicting the Nativity scene can become the focal point of a giant "stained glass" window.

Choose Your Theme

The home pictured above shows how effectively you can follow your own individual theme once it's decided upon by the whole family. Let your outdoor Christmas lights create a frame for your setting. If you study the pictures closely you'll notice that the C-9½-watt lights are mounted under the eaves about six inches apart. Use two strands or, tape up the excess cord on your regular lights which usually have sockets mounted about 18 inches apart. Many homeowners find that it's faster and easier to put lights up with small brass cup-hooks which can be left in place year after year. Hang evergreen festooning and lights at the same time to save wasted trips up and down the ladder.

Stained Glass Window

If you're looking for a new idea for your picture window, try transforming it into a "stained glass" window. As shown in the photograph above, bits of colored paper and freezer tape were used for the "leaded glass" effect around the lighted Nativity scene. The plaque itself, 31 inches high by 26 inches wide, has its own stained glass background. It is hung inside the window with fine wire. Two 25-watt bulbs give the scene its glowing effect and, if you use paper that lets some light through, your whole picture window will appear lighted. A red wooden candle, 49 inches high, with a lighted plastic halo greets guests as they approach the lighted doorway. Time saving lights, mounted on flexible aluminum strips are easily mounted around the front entrance.

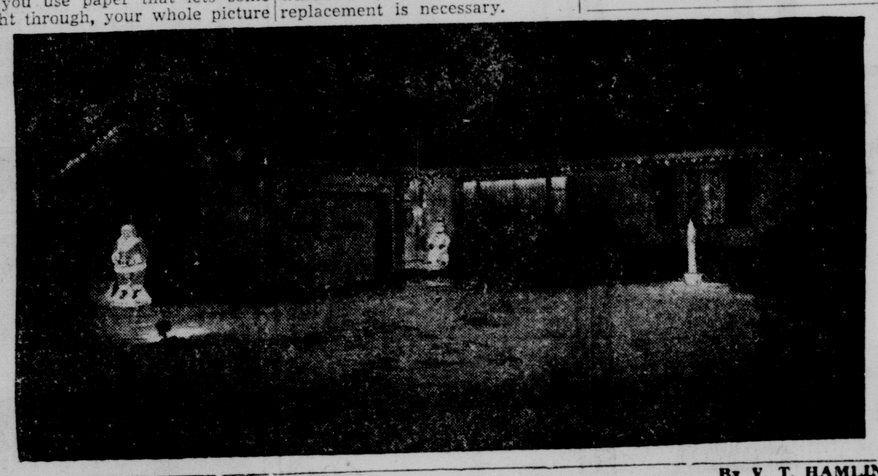
If there are small children in the family, give them the thrill of their own life size lighted Santa. The picture on the upper left above shows this full color giant, 60 inches high, pausing in his rounds. Heavy ground stakes hold him upright and his heavy vinylite plastic coating keeps him pletely weatherproof. A jolly weatherproof snowman greets the holiday guests. The even taller, 53-inch candle with its own "Season's Greetings" as well as the Santa and Snowman all have their own built-in household-type bulbs which can be easily reached when replacement is necessary.



Laundry hint: bluing is fine to use to neutrailze the yellow tint of white fabrics and make them appear white. But be sure to read the label on your bluing to see if it contains iron. If it does, your clothes must be thoroughly rinsed to remove the last traces of soap before bluing is added. Otherwise the soap and the iron in the bluing will combine to form rust spots on the clothes.

Our New Look In Orient: 'Jet-Propelled David'

By FRED SPARKS
NEA Staff Correspondent

TOKYO—(NEA)—When David stopped Goliath with a sling shot he proved you can lick a big guy without getting close enough for the giant to grab you.

That's what we'll do if we ever have to struggle with the Chinese giant again. We'll use a jet-propelled sling shot.

Chatting in Pearl Harbor and Tokyo with U.S. generals and admirals, I found "David and Goliath" the theme of our present "New Look" in the Orient.

We wrestled with the giant in Korea and while we bloodied his nose he dug too many American graves.

We're moving GIs out of Korea as fast as the ROKs can take over. It's doubtful—no matter what—if they'll ever return to the Asian mainland, except for shore leave in Hong Kong's Eternal Joy Ballroom.

* * *

We're telling friends like Korea and Siam and what's left of Indo-China we'll gladly furnish weapons and know-how (plus air and sea muscle) to plug any Red Chinese putsch. But they'll have to man the foxholes with their own sons.

After dark, Honolulu's hysterical streets recall World War II. GIs of the 25th Division (returned from Korea) outnumber possible dates ten to one and get their kicks having "Mother" tattooed on biceps.

The Pentagon figures that this body power sunbathing on Waikiki worries Peiping more than if it were shivering in a Korean tent. Reason: In Korea a GI is pinned down, out of any major show. But with our sea control he could shift quickly to any threatened island—like the Philippines, Formosa or Japan. Furthermore, he could raid China's endless coastline, making Red seaside sentries apply for mountain duty.

* * *

Major air units have been evacuated from Korea and Japan so the MIGs can't catch them asleep on the strip. Guam, in the Marianas, has again become the Home of the A-Bomb.

The planes that mushroomed Hiroshima and Nagasaki took off from the Marianas. Recently fat-bellied B-36s were snuggled under the palm trees.

They give us more flying block-busting power than we had in the Pacific when we made Hirohito quit without landing a single Marine. And Peiping is just a few cigarette puffs further for the intercontinental jets.

Newly trained Japanese soldiers are slowly taking over GI responsibilities here in Japan. The new army is democratic compared to Imperial days when a lieutenant would slap every face in his company if drill was shabby.

* * *

All Japan proudly waits for the two American destroyers, now en route, and re-named "Morning Breeze" and "Flag Fluttering Breeze." Unless history flip-flops again, the growing Japanese navy will help keep Communists from sampling sukiyaki on the Ginza.

Never forget: Japan is the Number One prize, with an industrial machine that can produce more toy fire engines—or shells—than all Asia combined. And with a military tradition that includes whipping Russia in 1905.

During the wartime peak we had 350,000 GIs in Korea. Now there are less than 100,000, which is unfair to shoe shine boys and night club headwaiters.

* * *

Under these condiitons the Pentagon thinks the ROKs could contain any attack—and give the taxpayers a break. The ROK army doesn't favor laundry units or hobby craft shops which make an American division cost $400,000,000 to equip, against $20,000,000 for natives.

On the political side, a suggestion last winter that American boys be sent to Indo-Chinese jungles scratched the bottom of public opinion polls.

On the military side, all U.S. generals — from MacArthur to Bradley—oppose our GIs fighting in mainland Asia's rice paddies.

If you live to be more than two years old there isn't much chance that you'll be killed by kindness.

A CHRISTMAS CAROL

BY CHARLES DICKENS

Whisking him away from the Fezziwigs', the Ghost took Scrooge back to the scene of his broken engagement. His fiancee rejected him because another idol had replaced her—a golden one.

And then, Scrooge saw what might have been.

Pound Sterling Hits Two-Year Lowest Point

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—The British pound sterling is at its lowest level in relation to the American dollar in two years—a more than seasonal weakness that has the experts scurrying around for explanations.

And the talk about making the pound freely exchangeable with the dollar is being shunted aside once more.

The British claim they have liberalized trade and currency exchange progressively this year so that soon it will look a little like convertibility.

American bankers point out that what Britain seems to be aiming at for the moment is a hard-top convertible—to use an automobile industry term. It may look like a convertible. But just try to roll the top back.

Convertibility is that state of comparative international financial innocence that prevailed way back when . . . in those pre-World War I days you could take some dollars and buy some British pounds, or French francs or Argentine pesos without hindrance, if you liked the rate the seller offered.

For the American businessman that meant if he sold $100 worth of his goods abroad he could bring 100 dollars back to this country if he liked. It meant that the American farmer could do the same, if he sold grain or cotton abroad.

Now the farmer often must accept the money of the country in which he sells—and if he has no use for the foreign money, chances are he can't make the sale, and the grain or cotton goes into a U.S. government price support warehouse.

Americans go on selling abroad when they can, or bartering when they can't get dollars, or playing three-way bookkeeping deals with other countries. Some big corporations have set up special departments to handle the new look in world trade.

Government agencies try three-way barter deals, also. The Foreign Operations Administration is workingout a deal with Denmark whereby we send her four million dollars worth of our surplus farm commodities. She in turn is to send an equal amount of her products to one or more nations to whom we already have promised foreign aid.

The whole thing will be done without the exchange of dollars in a world where exchange of currencies is now so difficult. If you count out the American taxpayers, that is. They put up the four million dollars in the first place to acquire the surplus farm products.

But progress is being made toward freeing trade and currencies. For example, France has just moved to lift import quotas on a long list of items Jan. 1. France's healthier finances helped speed the day.

West Germany is raring to go on all-out convertibility and so are Belgium and the Netherlands. The Economist, British weekly, notes that these three countries have "continually urged Britain to take the final and dramatic plunge into convertibility."

Most Americans, however, see little chance that England will do so until after the general elections next year. The Laborites are against it and the Conservatives fear to risk it in an election year.

Current weakness in the British pound isn't helping any. But most observers think that seasonal factors may be largely to blame for that.

Other things enter in, however. London's dock strike held up exports so that Britain didn't get the dollars she might have. She is making larger than usual purchases of tobacco and coal from us just now. Britain is paying in dollars for a large quantity of wheat bought for the account of continental Europe.

And some in the sterling area aren't getting as many dollars this year for their products—Australia, for example, isn't selling us as much wool this year. And this month Britain is to make its annual 180 million dollar repayment on loans by the United States and Canada.

FOR SMALL DELIVERIES—This three-wheeled delivery car made of Fiberglas-reinforced plastic was recently shown in New York City. The body is molded directly to the underhalf of the vehicle, which eliminates the conventional chassis. It has a cargo space of some 110 square feet, a 24-horsepower, four-cylinder, water-cooled rear engine, and cruises between 40-45 mph.
